PRINTED DAILY, BY P. LEGARDE.

St. Peter-Street, between Bourbon & Royal.

NEW-ORLEANS:

FRIDAY, MARCH 20, 1829.

LOUISIANA LEGION.

It is with sincere delight that our citizens have observed the exertions which are now making to restore the Louisiana Legion to its former importance as a public security, and to render it a military corps in every respect worthy of the immortal laurels it acquired on the ever memorable 8th of January 1815.

The decisive support that it has acquired from the wise policy of the present enlightened chief magistrate of our state, has, in a great measure, contributed to resuscitate the still late dormant energies of many members who had almost forgotten that they ever had the honour to belong to a corps which is justly entitled to the glorious appellation of the palladium of New-Orleans.

Its park of artillery has lately been repaired at a considerable expense, new arms have been furnished, and such other measures taken to re-allumine its military spirit as cannot fail soon to render it the bulwark of our public safety and a certain dependence upon any emergency whatsoever.

To compensate for the little inconveniences which its duties occasionally subject its members, Gen. Lacoste has most patriotically resolved, shortly to regale them with a steam boat excursion to his plantation below the city, when it is intended that the forenoon shall be passed in military exercises, and the afternoon in doing ample justice to the truly Amphytrionic style in which the General with his accustomed liberality has determined to receive them.

Governor Derbigny has also promised a like trip to his plantation on the opposite side of the river, so that nothing like encouragement or even recreative amusement will be wanting to renew that ardor which once so meritoriously distinguished the different companies of the corps.

While on the subject we would sing great the rigorously enforcing of the Militia duties, which would have the good effect of causing new uniform companies to be formed, and thus a gradual increase of our military strength would each day take place, and consequently afford additional security to our public tranquility and weal.

Greece.—Redcid Pacha of Janina and its dependencies having been called to Constantinople, to advise as to the means of defending Greece; a great insurrection broke out in that province. Etolie, Acarnania, the mountains of Thessalia, and Pindus, as far as Ochrina, were up in arms, and the Albanian Malhadenas, who have not been paid, are now joined with the insurgents. Such a movement must lead to important consequences.—The result, at present places the Christians of Prevesa under the knife of the Turks.—As to those of Janina, the greater part of them have taken refuge to the mountains.

The Russian fleet which is at Tenedos is accompanied by a swarm of Greek privateers, whose exploits will again bring ruin upon the commerce of the several neutral nations. Nothing could be more agreable to the Divan at this juncture, for there is no doubt that this course will give rise to collisions between the European Admirals, &c.

A private letter from Warsaw, dated 15th, Dec., and apparently written by a person who has access to the best sources of information, estimates the loss of the Russians in the last campaign at 50,000 men, of whom the greater part perished by decease. This estimate, which is said to agree with the official returns made at the Russian head quarters is probably rather under than above the truth.

IMPORTANT INTELLIGENCE FROM IRELAND.

The following most important communication from his excellency the Lord Lieut. of Ireland to Dr. Curtis, the R. C. Primate of Ireland, will be perused with great interest by all our readers, who can appreciate the intense feeling and serious consequences which it will produce in the Sister Kingdom:

PHŒNIX PARK, Dec. 23, 1828.

Most Revered Sir,—

I hasten to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22d, conveying that which you received from the Duke of Wellington of the 14th instant; and I hasten also to offer an answer to it.

I trust you will feel the confidence I have reposed in me.

Your letter gives me information upon a subject of the highest interest, and I know the precise sentiments of the Duke of Wellington upon the present state of the Catholic Question. Knowing it, I shall venture to offer my opinion upon the course that it behoves the Catholics to pursue.

Perfectly convinced that the final and cordial settlement of this great question can alone give peace, prosperity, and harmony to all classes of subjects in this kingdom, I must acknowledge my disapointment, on learning that there is no prospect of its being effected during the ensuing Session of Parliament. I, however, derive some consolation from observing that his Grace is not wholly adverse to the measure; for if he can be induced to promote it, he, of all men, will have the greatest facility of carrying it into effect.

If I am correct in this opinion, it is obviously most important that the Duke of Wellington should be propitiated; that no obstacle that can by possibility be avoided should be thrown in his way that all personal and offensive insinuations should be suppressed; and that ample allowances should be made for the difficulties of his situation.

Difficult it certainly is, for he has to overcome the very strong prejudices and the interested opposition of many persons of the highest influence, as well as to allay the real alarms of many of the more ignorant Protestants.

I differ from the opinion of the Duke that an attempt should be made to bury in oblivion the question for a short time; first, because the thing is utterly impossible, and next, because if the thing were possible I fear that advantage might be taken of the pause, by representing it as a panic achieved by the late violent re-action, and by proclaiming, that if the Government at once and peremptorily decided against concession the Catholics would cease to agitate and then all the miseries of the last year of Ireland would be to be reacted.

What I do recommend is, that the measure should not be for a moment lost sight of—that anxiety should continue to be manifested—that all constitutional (in contradictions to merely legal) means should be resorted to forward the cause; but that, at the same time, the most patient forbearance, the most submissive obedience to the laws should be inculcated, that no personal and offensive language should be held towards those who oppose the claims.

Personality offers no advantage, it effects no good; on the contrary, it offends and confirms pre-disposed aversion. Let the Catholic trust to the justice of his cause to the growing liberality of mankind. Unfortunately he has lost some friends and fortified his enemies, within the last six months, by unmeasured and unnecessary violence. He will soonest recover from the present stagnation of his fortune, by showing more temper, and by trusting to the Legislature for redress.

Brute force, he should be assured, can effect nothing. It is the Legislature that must decide this great question and my greatest anxiety is, that it should be met by the Parliament under the most favourable circumstances, and that the opposers of Catholic Emancipation shall be disarmed by the pacient forbearance, as well by the unwearied perseverance of its advocates.

My marked anxiety to promote the general interest of this country is the motive that has induced me to give an opinion and to offer advice,

I have the honour, &c.

(Signed) ANGLESEY.

Death of Don Miguel.—A private correspondent of the London Morning Herald under a Lisbon date of Dec. 20th. announces the death of Don Miguel on the 13th. attended with frightful convulsions. The greatest agitation prevailed the death of Don Miguel, as well as the determination of the constitutionalists to break out in open defiance of his authority, are bruited on all sides. The physicians of Don Miguel continue nevertheless, to issue daily bulletins assuring the public of his complete and speedy recovery.

Paris, Jan. 4th.—It is announced that on the 24th of September last, the King of Spain authorised the Minister of Foreign Affairs to sign a treaty by which France is inscribed for 80 millions of the public debt in the three per cent stock. The Spanish Government will pay to France four millions annually of which 2,400,000 francs for the interest, and 1,600,000 franks for the redemption of his stock.

Horrible Occurrence.—A woman named Judith Couture, wife of Pierre Guillot, of La Presentation, was committed to the jail of this city yesterday, for having cut the throats of five of her own children; one of whom only has died. By the accounts given to us, the unfortunate woman laboured under fits of insanity, in consequence of the death of her husband, during which she became deprived in mind and affected with the dreadful action that is worse than any to submit some [illegible] in order to excuse her [illegible]. Montreal Herald.

It is related that a discovery has been made of a house in Edinburgh, kept by one Burk and his wife, where persons have been enticed, murdered, and the bodies sold to surgeons. Twelve suits of clothes were found, belonging, as was supposed, to the victims of these wretches, who had been arrested.

American Mercury.

A horseman stopped at Harding's opposite Fair Mount, and without dismounting, called for a pint of beer. He lifted it and took another. After the second,—"Landlord, whose beer is this?" "Peter's, sir." "It's excellent stuff—I'll get off and try some."—
