MEMORANDA

☞ The towboat Invincible reports that the barque Clarisse, in going to sea under canvass, ran stem on to the stern of the ship Concord, laying aground on the Bar, carrying away the Concord's taffrail, and cutting her down to the transom. The Clarisse lost her bowsprit and jibboom, and sprung her head-knees, and it is supposed that both vessels are so much damaged that they will have to return to the city for repairs.

Steamer Walnut Hills reports six feet water in the upper Mississippi and falling—plenty of ice.

Steamer Paragon left Nashville on the 6th instant, and Clarksville the 10th. Reports the Cumberland river falling, and five feet water on Harpeth's Shoals—weather very cold.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, January 17, 1844.

The House met agreeably to adjournment. The roll being called 37 members answered to their names.

Mr Selby submitted a resolution appointing a committee of five to examine the condition of the various charitable institutions which receive assistance from the State. Adopted.

Mr Boudousquie offered a joint resolution appointing a committee of five to examine the Charity Hospital and report thereon.

Mr Briant offered a memorial of sundry citizens of St. Martins, praying for permission to dispose of certain property by a lottery. Referred to a select committee of three.

Mr Brewer offered a resolution to print 500 copies, in English and French, of the Governor's message in pamphlet form for the use of the House. He considered that the important topics embraced in the message required that it should be widely disseminated, and that every member should have an opportunity of supplying his constituents liberally with this document.

Mr Brashear moved to amend, by paying the public printer reasonably for it. The motion prevailed, and the resolution was adopted.

Mr Voorhies presented a memorial from the Board of Police of the town of Washington, which was referred to a select committee of three.

On motion of Mr Selby, the clerk was instructed to furnish Judge Elliott with a copy of the petition on the subject of his impeachment.

Mr Coffee, agreeably to notice, presented a bill to change the names of certain individuals.

ORDERS OF THE DAY.

Third Readings.

The following bills were read a third time and passed. An Act relative to justices of the peace, in the Parish of Sabine.

An Act to create an additional election precinct in the Parish of Sabine, with an additional section, creating additional precincts in St. Mary, and an amendment of the title in conformity thereto.

An Act to reorganize the police jury wards of the Parish of Natchitoches.

On motion of Mr Claiborne, the House took up the bill to create another office of associate judge of the City Court of New Orleans, and adopted it by sections.

The following bills were read a third time and passed: An Act regulating elections in the Parish of Sabine. An Act amending the charter of the Roman Catholic congregation of the Parish of St. Martins.

The Act to reduce the rate of conventional interest was taken up at its second reading and elicited a protracted debate.

Mr Winchester hoped the bill would not pass to a third reading in a hasty manner. He felt satisfied that all restrictions on interest were unwise and injudicious. No law could restrain a man from selling his property, and if an individual wanted money, he would obtain it, even though he should pay 10 or 12 per cent, for it, because this would be preferable to being compelled to sell his property at a loss of 25 or 30 per cent. Again, in the ratio of the increased danger of obtaining re-payment, would be the increase in the interest demanded. Thus a capitalist who lends money now at 10 per cent., if restrained by legal enactments, would cry by could not afford his money at a low rate, but would charge so much interest and so much for the risk, and the borrower would really have to pay more than before.

Mr Brewer had listened attentively to the arguments urged against the passage of this bill, but none had satisfied him that his project was not proper and loudly called for. The only questionwas, whether the Legislature were called upon to regulate the rate of interest at all, if not, 7 per cent, as well as 10 per cent, might be objected to, and all usury laws should be repealed. There was some apparent plausibility in the idea that a man could do as he pleased with his own money, but it would not bear a minute examination. The debtor often promises to pay a rate of interest which he finds himself utterly unable to discharge. Such an exorbitant rate proves injurious to the whole community—every one suffers from it. The market price of money affects the price of property, and 10 per cent. interest was now more than the ordinary vocations of life would justify. Money could not be safely invested at that price. Ten per cent. was rarely realized at present, from any pursuit.

There was no force in the argument, that if a capitalist could not afford to loan money at 7 per cent., because he would forfeit the interest, he would therefore be willing to lend it at 14 per cent. Would that be increasing the security of the loan? Was it not probable that he would, on the contrary, forfeit the whole amount of interest? It was his opinion that if the capitalist were restricted to 7 per cent. interest, he would seek other modes of investing his money; either in trade or real estate—and this he contended, was the most beneficial and salutary result that would flow from the adoption of the bill. The facility of borrowing at high rates, has been a material cause in producing the present deplorable embarrassments of the country. If the capitalist were to place his money in real estate, debtors would be enabled to sell their property at remunerating rates, and pay their obligations. His decided opinion was that large amounts of capital loaned at 10 per cent. were detrimental to the prosperity of the country, because there were few vocations, and especially the planting interests, which could yield such profits as would justify rates so exorbitant. The investment of capital in real estate, which is now applied to loans, would naturally flow from the passage of his bill; and as the monied man would become a bidder on property, it would necessarily rise in value, because it would yield a larger revenue according to the standard value of money in the State. The income would be greater in proportion to the capital invested.

Mr Brewer further remarked that no argument hitherto used had shaken his conviction. The rate of interest was regulated in every civilized country. It was well known that an individual in distress would stipulate almost any conditions to obtain money. Like the merchant of Venice, he would even consent to give a pound of flesh; desperate men must have it. But would it be wise to permit a desperate man to commit such wild and insane acts? No! because the balance of the community were affected by them. A man might burn down his own house, but if his property were contiguous to that of other men, he would be properly restrained, because the act might injure his neighbors. A similar principle applied to contracts which affected the whole community, and which it became the duty of this Legislative body to regulate.

Mr Wadsworth was totally opposed to restraining interest. Money, in his opinion, was like any other article of trade. Its value was regulated by the demand. He might be so circumstanced with respect to money as others might be with regard to the necessaries of life, and as in the latter case no sacrifice would be considered too much to obtain what was needed, so in the former might a man sorely pressed be willing to give 10, 15 or 20 per cent interest. True, the conduct of the lender would be unfeeling, but that would not alter the principle of the case. Men know what to do with their money, and are disposed to use it with advantage to themselves; but at the same time this produces a corresponding benefit to the community. If a capitalist asks more than a man can reasonably give for the rent of a house, he will lose a portion of the rent, therefore self-interest prompts him not to ask too much, and regulates the matter.

Our object was to make money flow into the country. If the security on loans were increased the value of property would augment, because greater facilities would be afforded in realizing such securities. It was folly to suppose that trade could be forced. It would and does obey natural laws. He, for instance, would not lend $10,000 on Mr Dupuy's plantation in Plaquemine, which was worth $60,000, because from the absence of the owner, bad management, &c, it does not pay expenses. But he would lend money at a lower rate to one whose industry and good habits were a guarantee of repayment. The only true course to pursue was to unrestrain the security on loans. He would illustrate his views: He loans $100,000 to the owner of the St Charles Hotel—his debtor goes into liquidation—the syndic raises the mortgage and sells the hotel for $50,000. True, he would still have a right on it, but the security is no longer as good as the original contract. The syndic may run away or prove faithless, but the building would still be there. This insufficient security was the true reason of the heavy rates of interest.

Mr Hunt, after stating that he had just entered and had not heard the preceding arguments, expressed his entire opposition to the passage of the bill. He called on members to beware how they proceeded. The proposition was intended to prevent individuals from borrowing money at a higher rate than 7 per cent. Why should the Legislature put a stop to this species of contracts, rather than to others? Money would always command what it was worth, and he who is in want of money best knows what he can afford to give for it.—He appealed to the democratic portion of the House.—Was it democratic to prevent an individual from entering upon a contract according to his own views of his own interest, and to invoke the strong arm of legislation to compel him to a certain course? There was nothing to justify such a view. Look at our city and state. Was there too much money here? On the contrary, the country needed money, like all new states, and should, hence, present inducements to capitalists to bring their wealth among us, and enable us to increase and multiply the products of our soil. It was a proposition which no practical man could doubt, that money was worth more here than in any other state, and that persons were unwilling to lend it here, when equal interest could be obtained elsewhere. The consequence of the reduction of the rate would be to drive capital out of the country and to remove the only inducement that now exists to attract it hither.

The argument that the reduction would produce the investment of money in real estate was utterly fallacious. If capital invested in real estate would produce 8 per cent., surely 10 per cent. would not be too much for loans of money. But the capitalist for the most part, was unwilling to invest his money in real estate. He wished to live at ease on his income, and loan his capital, but not to invest it permanently in real estate. It was futile to suppose that by reducing the rate of interest, the capitalist would be compelled to invest in real estate. He warned country gentlemen, that if they drove capital out of the country, they would fall into the hands of the very brokers, sharpers and usurers whom they dreaded and deprecated. He concluded by trusting the House would not reverse its former opinion.

Mr Brashear proposed that 8 per cent. should be made the highest rate of interest, as a middle ground between the two extreme opinions. He thought that the only bar to the loaning of money would be the alteration of the law which leaves lenders on mortgages at the risk of ultimate loss. Let that be changed, and at 7 or 8 per cent interest, as much money as was desirable would flow into the state. He admitted that every individual could borrow money on his own terms, but the object of the bill was to restrict the lender. It had been contended that money was like all other property. This he denied. Government gives to money a particular value; therefore it was the duty and province of government to regulate its use. Suppose the government embarrassed and in need of a large amount of specie. If it had to pay an exorbitant rate, a loan would operate most onerously upon it. Hence the right exists to restrain the rate of interest. Why is the rate of interest taken by banks restrained? In order that the wants and necessities of men should not be preyed upon by these institutions. Capitalists belonged to the same class. If banks were not thus limited, they would ask 10 or 12 per cent interest on loans, and were it so, merchants would give it if their necessities were pressing. This proved that the limitation of bank interest originated in sound views. He considered the best policy to be the reduction of the rate of interest and the affording strong guarantees to the lender. In New York loans were made at 4 per cent. The capitalist would not be contented with this small interest if he could get 8 here with the same guarantee. Again, if an individual can make money by loaning his capital at a high rate and oppressing the needy, he would assuredly do it, but does it thence follow that we should permit it. He thought not.

Mr Selby only desired to reply to one portion of the argument which had been left unanswered. The gentleman from Rapides (Mr Brewer) claimed to rely greatly on the usages of other nations in these past. There was some force in this, because experience generally instructs through mistakes; but it should be remembered that in old countries where usury laws existed, other laws prevailed, which harmonized, as it were, with such provisions. But [illegible] sale not qualified to [illegible] nor to [illegible]. Hence the [illegible] to the democracy. He thought him right—he thought it would not be [illegible] to sustain the bill and let it take [illegible]. He could not see why the legislature couldn't control a rule to pay a certain price for his plantation, as well as for money. With regard to the argument of the member who said we would be ruined if we paid 10 per cent interest, all he could say was that merchants universally charge 10 per cent on their accounts with the planters, and it was invariably paid without murmuring, because the planter was bound in honor and justice to pay.

Mr Brewer considered that if the spirit incorporated in the law were anti-democratic, then every state in the union was anti-democratic. If the views of the gentleman from Orleans (Mr Hunt) were correct, the municipalities of New Orleans should repeal their ordinances regulating hack drivers, and let these gentry charge what they pleased. But these ordinances were framed to prevent impositions. Why does the law prevent the needy from selling his estate for what he pleases, but grants him the privilege of recovering it in twelve months, if sold for less than half its value. Because the law has wisely thrown a shield between the debtor and the rapacious creditor. The law does not prohibit borrowing or lending—there was no obligation on either side—all that it contemplated was the forfeiture of the interest on loans, if that interest were made too high.

Did gentlemen know of any body willing to lend money now at ten per cent. on any security. He did not. The lamentations which it was said would flow from the passage of his bill, in reality arose from the deplorable condition of things. Mr. Brewer illustrated this position by adverting to the distressed state of the planters on Red River, who had borrowed at ten per cent., and whose whole income was absorbed in this oppressive interest.

Mr. Hunt would say a word or two in reply. The gentleman from St. Mary thought it a sufficient reply that the banks were restricted to a limited interest.—The answer to this was ready. Every one had heard of bank privileges. These institutions had particular rights—such as that of issuing more circulation than they had specie in their vaults, &c. Therefore they were not allowed to ask a high rate of interest on loans. But the gentleman was mistaken in point of fact. Some banks ask eight per cent., and in the Union, debtors on stock were compelled to pay interest at the rate of ten per cent.

The gentleman from Rapides seemed shocked at the appeal made to the democracy. He would take occasion to say that our government was founded on democratic principles, and he was willing to discharge the duties of a democrat as he conscientiously understood them. The words "whig" and "democrat" were mere party names, but the principles of democracy were stable elements of our government. It was bad taste in the gentleman to seek to sansculottize us, by ascribing different principles to different portions of the people. What had been the object of the contests of men for ages, but to throw off the shackles of bad government. On this subject of usury a glance at the enlightened powers of Europe would show that as civilization advanced, there had sprung up a liberal, sound-thinking party, wisely and consistently attached to correct principles, and opposed to the narrow theories sought to be introduced into this hall. As for the municipal regulations for the protection of strangers, he would say, and he meant no personal disrespect, that such corporations always have an itch for petty intermeddling, and just the same kind of feeling induced the gentleman from Rapides to tamper continually with the laws.

It was a great mistake to suppose that this House can regulate interest. No man at present is obliged to pay ten per cent. The legal rate is but five. Yet merchants continually borrow money at 1½, 2 and 3 per cent per month. In New York the security on loans was greater, hence the interest was small.

The gentleman from Rapides had carried the House up to Red River, and expatiated pathetically over the ruinous rates of interest paid by the planters. Granted; but when were these debts incurred, and by whom incurred?—they were obtained from the banks at the period when the unwise action of the General Government, in relation to a National Bank, had thrown into existence five hundred banks, which flooded the country with their circulation; their prices were inflated; now the delusion has passed away, and the debtors are unable to pay ten per cent. Mr. Hunt concluded by a warm appeal to the House not to take a retrograde step in the path of civilization.

A motion was made to lay the bill on the table, but was lost—yeas, 18; nays, 23.

Mr. Brashear moved to substitute 8 for 7 per cent. interest. Carried.

The bill was then adopted by sections.

The act authorizing certain donations was read a second time and adopted by sections, with amendments.

Mr. Taylor, from the committee on unfinished business, reported a bill to amend the acts relative to the Public Schools of New Orleans. Also a bill for the relief of J. Hernandez. Referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. Coffee moved an adjournment. Mr. Selby called for the yeas and nays, which stood—yeas, 21; nays, 15. So the House adjourned.

THURSDAY, January 18th, 1844.

The House met agreeably to adjournment. The roll being called, 37 members answered to their names.

The Speaker appointed Messrs. Stille, Ogden, Farmer, Morgan and Thibodeaux of Terrebonne, on the Committee to examine the several Charitable Institutions of the State.

Mr O'Bryan presented a petition from J Chevalier praying for relief—Referred to the Committee on Claims.

Leave of absence for a few days was granted to Col. Fluker.

Mr Thibodeaux, of Terrebonne, presented a petition from the inhabitants of Terrebonne, praying assistance in removing obstructions to Bayou Black.—Referred to a select committee of three.

Mr Brashear rose and observed, that in consequence of the melancholy intelligence of the demise of the Hon Alex. Porter, he would offer the following resolutions:—

Resolved, That it is with deep and painful regret that the Legislature of Louisiana is informed of the death of the Hon. Alexander Porter, who died at his home on the evening of the 13th instant.

In his death the State has been deprived of an able representative in the Senate of the United States; endeared to the people of Louisiana for his acknowledged abilities as a statesman; temperate, firm and liberal.

In the death of Alexander Porter, the State has lost, an adopted son, whom she has often delighted to honor for his many able services rendered to her.

Resolved, That the condolence of this House be tendered to the friends and relatives of Alexander Porter.

The Resolutions were unanimously adopted, and the house adjourned.

DRS DENTISTS

No. 29 [illegible]

L. BLANCHARD, [illegible] Dentist of the King and Queen of France, the Princes and Princesses, Surgeon-Dentist to the faculty of Medicine of Paris, and of New Orleans.

Fixes natural teeth, without the least pain, in imitation perfectly natural, from one tooth to a complete set;

Invests the second teething of children, and corrects very readily all irregularities.

He has had long experience, talents and constant practice in France and America in the dentist art, and all that relates to its operations, preserving at once the mouth and the teeth.

He possesses a new cement, which repairs ravages effected by decay, of the same color of teeth, and which is the only precious substance that has yet been employed—the other can at this time plumb the teeth so hermetical as this;

The operation is made without any pain, and is achieved in a few minutes.

Recently invented for the Teeth,

Odontine, without mixture, the most malleable and most perfect regularly employed.

A New Fusible water (platina) to plumb the teeth;

Lotto-Caustic, instantly causing pain in the teeth to cease.

Elixir to refresh the gums, consolidating the looseness.

Tooth-Water for healing the mouth and preserving the gums.

Spirit of Cayne rectified, to give a tone to spongious gums.

Opiate of Quinine to clean and fortify the teeth;

Tooth Brushes, of various kinds, to erase all sense of a fetid taste from the teeth.

☞ His Office, at No. 29 Royal street, is open every day from 9 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon, Sundays excepted. Charges moderate.

☞ ALSO—Store to let. Apply as above. m7

ODONTALGIC EXTRACT

B. F. SMITH,
No. 18 St. Charles street,

CONTINUES to relieve the most violent Toothache in a few moments, and at the same time entirely destroy the nerve in less than 24 hours positively without pain. The pain should be aware, however, that this remedy is not offered as a Universal Panacea, it being only successful when the pain proceeds from an exposure of the internal membrane or nerve.

For the truth of the above statement, the sceptical are referred to the following highly respectable gentlemen, most of whom can speak from experience:

Rev. W. A. Scott,	Dr. W. H. Teagarden
J. W. Stanton,	L. E. Connelly,
C. T. Young,	G. W. Tobin,
Morton Quirk,	W. B. Wheaton,
H. Williams,	W. G. Latham,
E. B. Orsborne,	D. Flannery,
B. Page,	L. Morehead,
	W. Stevenson.

By first destroying the nerve with this remedy, the excruciating pain frequently caused by inserting pivot teeth upon the old method, is entirely avoided.

All other operations carefully performed. m4
