LES Messieurs et Dames de cette ville sont respectueusement informés que la grande, ménagerie qui était depuis deux mois vis-à-vis le théâtre d'Orléans, a été transportée à l'encoignure des rues Tchoupitoulas et Poydras, où elle demeurera jusque vers le milieu d'Avril, après quoi elle quittera cette ville. Au nombre des animaux précieux qu'elle contient, se trouvent un Zèbre, le plus bel animal du monde, et le premier qui ait paru dans cette ville ; un Lion et sa femelle, deux Panthères, un Leopard et un Emu d'Afrique, l'un des plus grands de l'espèce emplumée, il y a aussi une paire de Chameaux arabes, et un Lama du Pérou, avec son petit. On verra les exercices amusans du nègre Dandy Jack, qui imitera les tours d'adresse des premiers écuyers en montant le cheval Shetland Pony, et en sautant par terre.

Il y a une autre curiosité qui jamais n'a été vue ici: c'est une guenon avec son petit qu'elle nourrit avec toute la tendresse d'une mère.

Les animaux ci-dessus et un grand nombre d'autres, composent la ménagerie actuellement offerte à la curiosité du public, mais plus particulièrement à celle des personnes qui désirent se familiariser avec les curiosités de la nature.

On n'a aucun danger à craindre, les animaux étant en sureté, et la place bien appropriée; la ménagerie est recouverte d'un pavillon.

On peut entrer depuis 9 heures du matin jusqu'à 9 heures du soir. 4 Mars

THE MAILS.—The communication of the Post Master General, which we publish to day, in answer to enquiries made of him by the Chairman of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads relative to the effects of discontinuing the Sunday mails upon the revenue and the comercial interests of the country, places the inexpediency of such a measure beyond all debate. The post Master General was not required to view the subject in its moral aspect, and with or without laws on the subject, he cannot act on the moral principle and long retain his office or his popularity such is the strong sensibility felt throughout the country. Sound moralists enquire only the way of duty, and reject totally the doctrine of expediency; a standard which every day proves far too evasive for general introduction, and by which it is feared too few of those who profess most unvaringly guage their lives. In the discussion already had in the House, opposite opinions have been developed, as might be expected. From all that has occurred there is no probability that any law will be passed restricting the passage of the Sunday Mails , although it is quite possible the present law will be repealed which makes it the duty of Post Masters to deliver letters and papers on Sunday,

In the debate in the House on a motion to print 9000 copies of the report of the Senate, the following remarks fell from one of the members, meant to double for wit; but quite too vulgar and undignified for the occasion and the subject.

[N. Y. Mer. Herald.

Mr. Weems would prefer having the report of the House—He bestowed many compliments upon the former, pronouncing it as his opinion, that a more correct view of the subject could not be given by the pen of man; and he wished it to go to his own respective constituents, that it might operate to put down all intermedling with the consciences of others, and thus prevent men from erecting to themselves an image of idolatry, or imagining, as some men appear to do, that they could go to Heaven in the United States' Mail. Mr. W. said that he heard a voice on his right, suggesting to him that such persons would not travel on Sunday, even to get there; but this he could hardly believe, as he rather thought they would be willing to travel on any day of the week rather than not get there.

Interesting work on Louisiana.—Barbé Marbois, a Peer of France, well known in this country as Chargé d'Affaires from Louis 16th to the old Continental Congress, and as the plenipotentiary of the First Consul for making with Messrs. Livingston and Monroe the treaty, by which Louisiana, was ceded to the United States, has just published in Paris a work upon the history of Louisiana, and of the cession of that colony to the United States of America, preceded by a discourse upon the constitution and government of the United States.

The remarks respecting our constitution and government, by which the history of Louisiana is preceded, breathe the strongest feelings of respect and admiration for our free institutions, and though there are occasioned misconception of the views of the different parties that have heretofore divided public opinion, there are few treaties on the same subject, either European or American, that evince as much accuracy of information.

The first part of the history of Louisiana gives an account of the colonization of that province by France and Spain, the second is devoted to the negotiation of the treaty of cession, and the concluding pages relate to Louisiana since its acquisition by the Union.

Every portion of the work is valuable for the light which it throws on the history of an important section of the United States ; but the remarks respecting the negociation, coming, as they do, from the pen of one of the parties immediately concerned in the transaction, possess a peculiar interest. The motives of Bonaparte, as communicated at the time to his ministers, for parting with the province, are extremely curious and are given in the First Consul's own words,

We learn that the work of Mr. de Marbois is about to be made generally accessible to Americans; a gentleman of this city, recently in our diplomatic service, being engaged in translating it in Paris. It will probably be published in this country in the course of the ensuing spring, with an introduction by the translator.—N. Y. Amer.

EARTHQUAKES.—The earthquakes in the East Indies occured about the time that one was felt at Genoa, and in other parts in Europe. As the duration of its motion was from East to West, may it not have been the same which extended internally round nearly two thirds of the globe? Shocks have been mentioned as having been experienced about the same period in Egypt. Something like a connection may therefore, be traced, which would confirm of Professor Leslie, that our planet has a widely cavernous structure, and that we tread, live, fight, make laws, and raise what we imperishable monuments, on a mere crust. This system would explain at once, and much more easily than the subterraneous communications of volcanoes through a solid earth, the frequency of earthquakes, and the astonishing rapidity with which their motion is transmitted to the most incredible distances. It would also account for the total disappearance of cities, which have at once been engulphed, without leaving any trace but a cloud of dust and smoke behind them.

An awful Squinting at Monarchy.—The following is a literal extract of a letter from the Dey of Algiers to Mr. Madison, of the 24th April, 1825.

"To His Majesty, the Emperor of America, its adjacent and dependent Provinces and coasts, and wherever his Government may extend, our noble friend, the support of the Kings of the nation of Jesus, the pillar of all Christian Sovereigns, the most glorious among the Princes, elected among many Lords and Nobles, the happy, the great, the amiable James Madison, Emperor of America, (may his reign be happy and glorious, & his life long and prosperous,) wishing him long possession of the seat of his blessed throne, and long life and health; Amen! Hoping that your health is in good state I inform you that mine is excellent, thanks to the Supreme Being, constantly addressing myself to the Almighty for your felicity."—Nat. Int.

BUONAPARTE.

A work has just appeared at Paris, after having been for some time expected with great curiosity, entitled, "Memoirs, Correspondence, and unpublished Political and Liberty Tracts of Paul Louis Courier." The following confidential satire (in one of the letters) on the great political comedy, namely, the proclamatin of Napoleon as emperor by the army of Rome, is amusing enough, and shows considerable acumen on the part of the writer:—

TO M. N.——

Plaisance, May 1804.

We have just made an emperor; and I have been of some service in the affair. The following is the history of it

This morning d'Anthonard assembled us, and told us what was in agitation, but plainly and without any preamble or peroration. "An emperor or the republic, which is to your taste?"—just as people say, "Roast or boiled; pottage or soup; which will you have?" His harangue finished, we all sat still, looking at one another "Gentlemen, what is your opinion?" Not a word; nobody opened his mouth. This lasted a quarter of an hour or more, and was becoming embarrassing, both to d'Anthonard and to every one, when Maire, a young man, a lieutenant, whom you may have seen, rose and said, "If he wishes to be an emperor, let him be so; but to speak my sentiments, I do not think it at all advisable." "Be explicit," answered the colonel; "do you wish it, or not?" "I do not wish it." "Very well." "Renewed silence. We recommenced looking at one another like people who had met for the first time; and we should have done so until the present moment if I had not spoken. "Gentlemen," said I, "it seems to me, under correction, that we have nothing to do with this. The nation wishes for an emperor: is it for us to deliberate about it?" This reasoning appeared so powerful, so luminous, so ad rem, that I carried the meeting with me. Never had an orator more complete success. We rose signed and went to play at billiards. "Faith, commandant," said Maire to me, "you speak like a Cicero, but, pray, why are you so desirous that he should be an emperor!" "To put an end to the business, that we may go and play our game at billiards: Were we to stay there all day? Why, do you envish it?" "I do not know," he replied, "but I thought him made for something better." Such was the remark of lieutenant, which is far from appearing to me to be a silly one. In fact tell me to what purpose is this? A man like him—Buonaparte—a soldier—the head of the army—the first captain in the world—to wish to be called "your Majesty!" To be Buonaparte—and to become "Sire!" He aspires to descend. But, no; he thinks he is rising, in placing himself in an equality with kings: he prefers a title to a name. Poor man! his ideas are below his fortune. I suspected it when I saw him give his young sister to Borghese and believe that Borghese did her too much honor.
