The following sketch of the life of the President of Greece from the pen of Dr. Granville, may at this period be deemed interesting:—

"Count Capo d'Istrias was born at Corfu, where he was filling a public situation of trust under Government in the year 1802, at the time of my visiting that island, and was held in high esteem by his fellow citizens. Corfu and the rest of the Ionian Islands were then under the protection of Russia; but enjoyed a form of government of their own, as has been the case since their occupation by Great Britain. The Representative of the Russian Monarch at that time residing in Corfu, was Count Mocenigo, a nobleman who, by his impartial conduct, had gained the esteem of persons of all parties. He lived in a style of splendour well becoming his high station, and it was at his hospitable table that I recollect seeing, for the first time, Count Capo d'Istrias. One could observe, even at that early period of that gentleman's public career, that he possessed within him all the necessary elements for ensuring his future elevation. General Romieux, the Representative of the French Consular Government to the Septinsular Republic, near to whom I sat on that day, said to me, pointing to the Count;—"Cet homme ira bien loin dans la carrière de la diplomatie. Il ne lui faut que des circonstances favorables." The General's prophecy has long been verified; but its final and most triumphant accomplishment is even now taking place, by the Count's elevation to the chief station in the Greek Government. From the year 1813, when Capo d'Istrias was Minister Plenipotentiary from the Emperor of Russia to the Swiss Cantons, and, for his firm and upright conduct, was honoured with the right of citizenship by one of the Cantons, to the beginning of 1827, his career has been, with little interruption, a constant succession of highly honourable distinctions. He assisted at all the most important deliberations in some of those congresses of sovereigns which peculiarly mark the diplomatic history of Europe during the last fifteen years; and, on the part of Russia, affixed his name to the memorable Treaty of Peace, concluded in Paris on the 20th of Nov. 1818. In the full enjoyment of the confidence and good opinion of his Sovereign, the Emperor Alexander, Count Capo d'Istrias followed his Imperial Master to St. Petersburg after the signature of that Treaty, where he assumed, in conjunction with Count Nesselrode, the functions of Secretary of State for the Foreign Department. The distracted state of public affairs in the infant Government of independent Greece, in 1825, demanded the presence of a man of energetic mind, well acquainted with that country and the character of its inhabitants, accustomed to direct the engines of public authority, and familiar with those forms of general administration which are best suited to the capacity of infant States, and more in unison with the interests and existing institutions of the nations most likely to hold intercourse with Greece. The representatives of that country looked on Count Capo d'Istrias as the only individual who united in himself all those important qualifications, added to an ardent affection for the land that gave him birth. On him, therefore, the unanimous choice of his fellow-citizens fell; and he was proclaimed President of the Executive Government by the Greek National Assembly in the Spring of 1827."

A Rose Noble, one of the singularly beautiful gold coins of the reigns of Edward the Third, was lately turned up by the plough, in a field belonging to Sir George Armytage of Kirklees Park, situated at Crosley, in Mirfield. It is nearly the size of half a crown, but not so thick, quite bright and in a good state of preservation.—Bath Chron.

O'Connel's Tower.—The peasantry of the county of Clare, have erected a solid conical tower of stones and sods, on the highest hill in that county, (Gaug,) and christened it "O'Connel's Tower." It is about 20 feet high, and 15 feet round the bases.

(Dublin Morning Register.

If the following ancient looking, quaint and time-honored paragraph, which is now afloat in the newspaper element, be correct, the translation of a few words in the book of Genesis cannot be correct:

Origin of kissing.—"Some Trojans that escaped in the sacking of Troy, took such ships as they found in the Haven, and putting to sea, were driven by the winds to a part of Tuscany, near that place where Rome now stands, and the men being gone on hunting, the women having been very seasick, the noblest of them called Roma, persuaded the other women to set their ships on fire, that so they might go to sea no more; the men at their return, finding their ships burnt, were exceeding angry with their wives, whereupon to pacify them, they went and kissed them on their mouths, whence that custome was taken up, which continues till this day of saluting by a kisse."
