FOR GOVERNOR

HENRY JOHNSON.

NEW-ORLEANS:

MONDAY MORNING, JAN'Y 17, 1842.

OUR WHOLE COUNTRY.

Scattered along the stony ways of the politician, at intervals, few and far between, we pick up now and then, a gem fit to adorn the coronet of the republic, and we snatch at it with as eager a grasp as the lapidary, toiling amid Brazilian sands, seizes upon some covered diamond. Of this character are the annexed resolutions, which were introduced into the House of Representatives a few days since by Mr. Sweaze and unanimously passed that body on Friday last.

Let us, however, before treating of these resolutions, advert to a few incidents of Congressional history, which we take a most especial pleasure in laying before our readers as indicating the existence of a national sympathy which demagogues would fain persuade us is extinct within the land. It is refreshing; to turn from the vindictive jargon of sectional recrimination to these instances of united action, which encourage the belief that fanaticism has made but little progress in sapping the foundation of the Union. Did the press generally take as much delight in publishing the evidences of a reciprocal attachment between the different sections of the Union, as it does in reproducing the inflamatory ebulitions of faction, we would soon present to the world a confederation of States as intimately united in affection as in interest and in destiny. We are but one people, and as such must abide a common fate. If one star is lost from the flag of the Union, the lustre of the whole will be gone.—There will not remain a mutilated constellation, bright, beautiful and harmonious, but the lost Pleiad will drag her sister States into the dread abyss, and the sun of liberty will go down in seas of blood.

But to the record. On the last day of the session of congress of 1838-39, when our boundary troubles assumed a most threatening aspect, the southern members rallied to the cause of the north and, unanimously we believe, voted to place at the disposal of the president (Mr. Van Buren) a force sufficient to engage in immediate hostilities with England. Can the imagination conceive of a question in which the people of the south have less concern than the ownership of the barren lands between the Aroostook and the St. Lawrence? Yet their representatives scorned to weigh the matter of interest in the balances against the honor of the nation. The rights of Maine were espoused by the south; even Georgia sustained her claims at the hazard of war, notwithstanding she had an unsettled difficulty with that state, growing out of her refusal to surrender, upon the demand of the governor, certain persons charged with having violated the laws of Georgia.

If the course pursued in the above case was honorable to the south, if it displayed a love of country coextensive with the periphery of the union, the following instance of a like patriotism upon the part of the north, should not go without its just meed of praise.

The unlawful confiscation of American property driven by stress of weather within the jurisdiction of the British West India authorities, was brought before the senate of the United States in the matter of the brig Enterprise. The result of the debate upon the circumstances of that case, was the adoption of the following resolutions—every member of the senate present voting in the affirmative:

"Resolved, That a ship or vessel on the high seas, in time of peace, engaged in a lawful voyage, is, according to the laws of nations, under the exclusive jurisdiction of the state to which her flag belongs, as much as if constituting a part of its own domain.

"Resolved, That if such a ship or vessel should be forced by stress of weather, or other unavoidable cause, into the port, and under the jurisdiction of a friendly power, she and her cargo, and persons on board, with their property and all the rights belonging to their personal relations, as established by the laws of the state to which they belong, would be placed under the protection which the laws of nations extend to the unfortunate under such circumstances.

"Resolved, That the brig Enterprise, which was forced unavoidably by stress of weather into Port Hamilton, Bermuda Island, while on a lawful voyage on the high seas, from one part of the Union to another, comes within the principles embraced in the foregoing resolutions; and that the seizure and detention of the negroes on board by the local authorities of the island, was an act in violation of the laws of nations, and highly unjust to our own citizens to whom they belong."

These resolutions were adopted on the 15th of April, 1840, and as we before said without a dissentient vote. The circumstances of the affair of the Enterprise, are identical with the other outrages perpetrated upon American property by the British local authorities in the West Indies, of which we have frequently heretofore spoken.

Taking the above instances of reciprocal assistance volunteered by the North and the South towards each other, as evidences of a national feeling which has survived the clash of faction and the machinations of the incendiary, do they not furnish a theme for exultation? Of the readiness of the South at all times to maintain the national dignity, whether it is assailed in a matter of vital interest to her (in a local sense) or not, she has given repeated proofs; and should we not regard the resolutions above quoted as demonstrative of a like patriotism in the North? The principles laid down in those resolutions, we have no doubt will be as warmly supported, when the trial comes, by our northern brethren, as the integrity of Maine and New York will be maintained by their Southern brethren.

To return to Mr. Sweaze's resolutions. They speak the voice of the State—the true feelings of the South. Deeply as British outrages in the Gulf upon our slave property affects us, in our resentment we are not unmindful of the wrongs sustained by our sister States; and in laying our grievances before the National Government we invoke not its interference to redress our injuries alone. No; we approach the national power as Americans, and demanding its strong arm to maintain our rights, we call upon it to protect the rights of others also. We have an abiding trust in the patriotism of all the parts of this wide spread Republic; and albeit sectional jealousies may for a time obscure the judgment and local prejudices for a season chill the warm current of the heart, we cannot believe that there exists a radical enmity between the States. We do not feel it here. Look at the resolutions of our Legislature, men of the North, and say if the patriotism of Louisiana is restricted to the limits of the State? Not all that designing politicians, or reckless fanatics have said or sung to alarm our apprehension upon the subject of slavery, have made us forget that you are our countrymen. And we might call upon you to meet us half way, and rebuke the demagogues that would strew the seeds of enmity between us.—We are as jealous of your rights as of our own, and would go as far to avenge a violation of the territory of the remotest State of the confederacy as to repel aggression from our doors. The following are the resolutions as they passed the House of Representatives, unanimously, on Friday:

"Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened: That the aggressive policy of the British government, in its unwarrantable claims to the territory of a sister State, in its flagrant violation of the territory of another, in its repeated outrages upon American commerce, and most especially in its recent interference with the rights of property, in the case of an American vessel thrown by disaster within its jurisdiction, calls loudly for redress.

'Resolved, That our confidence in our Senators and Representatives in Congress, forbids us to fear that the rights of American citizens, and the honor of the American name, will suffer at their hands.'

'Resolved, That we look to the National Government for the vindication of the national honor, and we pledge the hearty co-operation of the State of Louisiana; in all that its maintenance may require.'

'Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, to be laid before that body.'

The Sonnambula was admirably performed at the St. Charles on Friday night, and was, we doubt not, better executed last evening, inasmuch as the little defects that are generally visible at a first performance are corrected on a repetition.

Melancholy Casualty.—Capt. James Bradish of the steamboat Norma, came to his death by drowning on the night of Tuesday last. He is supposed to have fallen from the hurricane deck of the steamboat, during a wet and gloomy night while the Norma was on her way from Shreveport to this city.

Repudiated.—The bonds of the Planters' Bank of Mississippi, endorsed by the United States Bank of Pennsylvania, and by Richard Alsop, were protested for non-payment at New York, on the 2d instant, to the amount of something like $800,000.

The ground on which Mr. Alsop refuses to pay is, that the bonds have a seal on them, which prevents him from being legally bound.

Case of Dr Peyroux.—The evidence in this case terminated on Saturday, and after a detailed argument on the part of the District Attorney, and a most ingenious and elaborate defence by the prisoner's counsel, C. K. Johnson, Esq., the jury retired, and in a few minutes returned with a verdict of guilty.

Tennessee.—The Senate of Tennessee has adopted the resolutions introduced by Mr. Laughlin, (Loco) shocking Hopkins L. Turney and Thomas Brown, U. S. Senators—another humbug, says the Nashville Whig, which the house will hardly be a party to, so far as to consent to entertain the resolution.

Since the above we have seen Nashville papers of a later date which state that Mr. Laughlin's resolutions have been laid on the table by the house of representatives. It has also passed a resolution to go into the election of U. States senators on the 7th inst., and another in favor of the repeal of the bankrupt law.

MISSISSIPPI.

We are indebted to the clerk of the steamboat Victorious, for a late Vicksburg Sentinel, containing the Inaugural Address of Governor Tucker. The governor makes a distinction between the state bonds issued in favor of the Planters Bank, and those in favor of the Union Bank. The former he thinks should be paid—unless they were made in violation of the Constitution of the U. States which prohibits the States from emitting paper bill of credit.

The Union Bank bonds, he thinks the State under no moral or legal obligation to discharge; but nevertheless suggests the propriety of passing a law to assume the payment of them, in order to give to the people an opportunity of electing members to the legislature who are in favor of paying them, if they think fit to do so. By the Constitution of the State every bill pledging the faith of the State for the payment of money, has to be passed by one legislature, then submitted to the people, and if the next legislature sanctions it, it becomes a law, not otherwise.

The governor thinks the State ought to refuse its share of the proceeds of the distribution act, though he says the pre-emption feature of that bill might greatly promote her interests.

Messrs. Stebbins & McAllister, the highly respectable Brokers in New York, who "suspended" in that city last week in consequence of Illinois "repudiation," have resumed payments, and on Friday again were at the Broker's Board.

☞ The New York Tribune takes very strong grounds against the repeal of the bankrupt law. We are with the able and industrious journal heart and soul, and shall not suffer the question to slumber.

☞ The schooner Antoinette, Cates, of and for New York, from Turks' Island, with 6000 bushels of salt, was driven ashore on the south west point of Newport Island, and bilged, on the 1st inst. The schooner may be got off, but the cargo is all lost.

J. S. Brown, a glorious comedian, has arrived in town.—At whichever of the theatres he may play, we will venture to guarantee crowded houses.

Georgia.—Little doubt of the election of Colquitt, Cooper and Black, the three locofoco candidates. The majority from the latest, will not probably be large.

☞ General Murphy, our Chargé d'Affaires to Guatemala, had arrived at Balize, on his way thither, and was received with marked attention.

☞ The child that was seized and mangled by a leopard at the Bowery Theatre, will, it is said, recover from the injuries inflicted, though it has been dreadfully lacerated.

Mr. Burritt, the learned blacksmith, is lecturing in New York, on genius and application. He is an extraordinary illustration of both.

We acknowledge our obligations to the Clerk of the steamboat J. Nicoll, for very late Nashville papers.

☞ We are greatly indebted to the officers of the steamer Scioto Valley, for late Louisville papers.

☞ We are indebted to the officers of the steamboat John Jay, for late Little Rock (Ark.) papers.

☞ We have received Gov. Seward's message to the Legislature, and shall furnish an abstract in a day or two.

Disastrous Fire.—A fire broke out in the town of Medina, Orleans Co., N. Y. on the 25th ult, which destroyed a number of stores and other buildings. The loss will probably exceed $25,000, a small part of which only is covered by insurance.

☞ It appears that the locality originated with Mr Tyler himself, and that Mr. Webster was employed to give it form and comliness. Even the great northern bear, however, could not lick the monstrous cub into shape.—Prentice.

☞ Mr. Buchanan, in his late able speech upon the exchequer, pays the kindest compliments, in almost every breath, to Mr. Tyler personally; but is terribly severe upon him in regard to the fiscality. He bows with infinite politeness to his Accidency's flag, while, at the same time, he is pouring hot shot into his hull.—Ib.

Confession of a Counterfeiter.—The last number of the Upper Mississippian, printed at Rock Island, Illinois, contains a long article which purports to be the Confession of Samuel S. Chase, a counterfeiter, recently sentenced to the State Penitentiary for four years. He seems to have figured very largely as a bogus-maker and counterfeiter of bank notes, and estimates the number of persons engaged in the business at about three hundred—scattered over Missouri, particularly in the Platte country, Illinois, Iowa, Indiana and Michigan. He gives many particulars of this operation—names of persons and places in all of the States, and, if true, unfolds a mass of depravity in persons who, for aught we knew, are respected as good citizens.

LATE FROM NASSAU.

Savannah, January 8, 1842.

We are indebted for files of the Royal Gazette to the 29th ult, received at this port last evening, per schr. Ermina, Capt. Edgecomb.

Capt. Edgecomb informs us that the ship Rob Roy, from New York for Mobile, which put in at Nassau, leaky, some time since, had had all her copper taken off and had been re-caulked, and was nearly ready to proceed on her voyage.

Capt. Ensor, of the brig Creole, sailed from Nassau on the 7th ult. as passenger in the barque Louisa, for Havana. He had entirely recovered from the wounds at the mutiny of the negroes on board his vessel.

The Royal Mail Company's line of steamers were not to commence running until the 1st.

The Gazette of the 11th says:—We learn within the last day or two that a vessel called the Union, from New York, bound to Bermuda, Turks Island, and this place, when near the Caicos, her first destined port, experienced a severe blow, which threw her on her beam ends and otherwise so disabled her, as to cause her being abandoned at Bermuda to the underwriters.

[Private Correspondence of the Bee.]

Washington, Jan. 5, 1842.

In senate the morning hour was consumed in the reception of petitions, memorials and reports from committees.

Some little discussion arose on the presentation of a memorial, presented by Mr. Calhoun, praying that certain foreign prints imported should be placed among the articles exempted from duty in the revenue act of last session.—This memorial Mr. Calhoun proposed referring to the Committee on Commerce. Mr. King thought the Committee on Finance the proper one. Mr. Huntington agreed with Mr. King, and Mr. Calhoun finally consented that the reference should be to the Committee on Finance.

Some bills were advanced on the passage, and a few passed—mostly private bills.

Mr. Clay gave notice that he would to-morrow ask leave to introduce a bill for the protection of copy rights.

Mr. Tallmage's motion to refer the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury and the accompanying bill relative to an exchequer Fiscality to a select committee coming up in the orders of the day,

Mr. Morehead had the floor, and spoke for upwards of an hour, denouncing the whole scheme as at war with whig principles, and objecting to its acceptance by Congress, under any modification that could be devised, so long as the features of a Government bank were attached to it.

Mr. Simmons spoke next, urging the consideration of the subject with a view of modifying the proposed bill so as to avoid all objections, and at the same time afford relief to the country.

Mr. Woodbury obtained the floor next, but yielded for a motion to adjourn.

The Senate then adjourned.

In the House of Representatives nearly two hours were consumed on a motion of Mr. Adams to amend the journal, which he affirmed did not contain a true version of his abolition movements yesterday. The debate was finally terminated by the adoption of a resolution laying the whole subject on the table.

Mr. Proffit complained of the discourteous remarks of Mr. Arnold made yesterday.

Mr. Arnold commenced a reply in a rather personal manner, when he was called to order.

Mr. Fillmore, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported a bill authorising the issue of Treasury notes.—He said he abhorred the system; but the committee had been forced to adopt it as the only means of relieving the urgent wants of the Treasury.

After an ineffectual motion by Mr. Stuart to lay it on the table, the bill was read twice and committed.

The next business in order was the motion of Mr. Arnold to reconsider the vote by which the tariff question had been referred to the committee on manufacture.

The question pending was an appeal from the decision of the chair, that Mr. Arnold was in order in replying to Mr. Bark, instead of confining his remarks to the motion of reconsideration.

After some debate, the decision of the chair was sustained. Mr. Arnold then stated that he had concluded to write his speech instead of delivering it on the floor. That being the case, he withdrew his motion of reconsideration.

The House then adjourned.

BATON ROUGE CONVENTION.

At the Convention of Delegates from the different parishes in the second congressional district, which assembled at Baton Rouge on the 3d inst, John Buhler, Esq., was nominated the whig candidate for congress from that district. Before the convention adjourned, the following patriotic and spirited resolutions were introduced by the Hon. F. D. Conrad, chairman of the committee appointed for that purpose, and were unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, That the great teacher, experience, with a finger pointed at our prostrated manufactures, our stagnated commerce, our discouraged agriculture, urges, in accents portending a still darker future, (if her counsels be not heeded) the indispensable necessity which exists, for the immediate creation of a National Bank.

Resolved, That the president, in his last message, furnishes the most forcible internal evidence of his own settled convictions, that the great interests of the country, demand the creation of such an institution, for it is deemed undeniable that, in the message, he proposes the plan of National Bank, but the ghost of a name, and other morbid visions still haunting his imagination, he has been terrified into the adoption of a scheme, fraught with all the unconstitutional objections that have been urged, by its opponents, to such a bank as the country has desired, a scheme greatly inferior, in promise of usefulness, to any of those proposed by the whig party, and one from which, probably, more danger is to be apprehended than from any other project of a National Bank ever yet offered to the country.

Resolved, That the sketch given of his bank, in the message, is too limited to permit a safe and decided judgment by minds, not familiar with such subjects; but we greatly apprehend that the president's plan, viewed as an agent to invigorate commerce, and regulate exchanges, is entirely inefficient in form and substance, and totally inadequate to carry out the objects, and purposes of a National Bank.

Resolved, That from this imperfect view of the plan afforded in the Message, we have misgivings that its insignificance as an exchange and commercial agent, is not its worst feature; we hope it may not prove a wonderful efficiency, in working political mischief; we have a fear that a bank which is seemingly to be directed by political aspirants and political partizans, under the control of the government, and that head of the government, may affect little or no financial improvement, may spread corruption, contribute to the decay of public virtue, operate the union of the sword and the purse, and achieve the triumph of one man power principle.

Resolved, That, although some of the past acts of the administration, give poor promise of the capacity or patriotism of its head, and that, although, with the exception of the distinguished individual who fills the state department, there is, in the composition of the cabinet, small guarantee afforded of its theoretical wisdom or practical sagacity, yet we recommend to the whig party, a firm adherence to the patriotic determination to sustain all the acts of the administration which have a tendency to promote the interests of our beloved country.

Resolved, That we have viewed with feelings of unspeakable regret, an effort made to distract the whig party in the choice of their candidate, to fill the next presidential vacancy. Every circumstance and consideration which should influence a party professing to be actuated by principles of virtue and patriotism, every inducement which has reference to our final success, every feeling of pride, springing from a consciousness of the prominent claims of our candidate, his transcendent abilities, incorruptible integrity, tried patriotism and constancy, every motive of gratitude which can bind a party to a man, all concur in designating to the whig party one individual, him alone, as their candidate for the next presidency. Is it not anticipated that we mean the great son of Kentucky, the illustrious Henry Clay? He of all others, can, with assurance of success, bear aloft our glorious banner and cause it to wave in triumph on the summit of the capitol.

Resolved, That this convention entertain no other fear about the success of the congressional candidate who has been this day nominated, than the consequences to be apprehended from the blameable lassitude, which seems to have crept into the whig ranks, since the vote messages of the president—those monuments of human caprice, inconsistency, and weakness, those daring specimens of executive abuse of power, which marred their patriotic hopes, brought disappointment and distrust among them, and revived the aspirations of the party which had just been so signally driven from power, without the remotest prospect of reorganization. From these apparent symptoms of despondency in the whig party, an augury favorable to themselves, and stimulated by the encouragement received from the result of some late elections, our opponents are inspired with fresh courage, and are putting into operation all their activity, and every species of agitation. We entertain then the most confident belief, that this desperate struggle of the party to repossess itself of power, will have the natural effect of arousing the whig party to such an exertion of its undoubted strength, as to ensure a victory more brilliant, if possible, than that which in November, 1840, was achieved by a nation's patriotism.

On motion of N. Bowman, the resolution's were adopted en masse by the convention.

On motion of N. Bowman, resolved that the proceedings of this convention be published in the Baton-Rouge Gazette, and Louisiana Chronicle, and the whig papers in the State.

SAM. M. D. CLARK, President, of the District of Convention.

N. Bowman, Secretary.
