Our report of Tuesday last left the cotton market in a very inactive condition, since which time the business has been of a rather limited character, with the exception of Wednesday, which was active, and small operations, extending to about 1,500 bales, were made at prices fully [illegible] quotations, and only from factors who disposed of, due to day, a few uncertain hanged bonds, making the total sales since our last to 3,000 bales. There is no positive change to notice in the character of the market, although a shade in [illegible] prices have to some instances been accepted.
