NEW ORLEANS:

THURSDAY, MARCH 12, 1829.

MORE ROBBERY AND STABBING.

☞ Gentlemen of the City Guard and honourable Members of the City Council, are we protected or are we not? Until what hour are we permitted to walk the public streets? If you cannot preserve us from robbery and assassination, at any rate let us know it, and then we will endeavour to keep our doors fastened and only to venture out side our houses but during the time when the Brilliant God of the Peruvians obliges the dark descendants of Cacus to keep themselves hid in their fiendish haunts. You will probably say such phrases are well calculated to fill up a corner of the gazette. Well, it may be so; but here is something positive.—The night before last a gentleman of this city named Drozin Wiltz, whilst passing the corner of Bourbon and St. Anne streets, was attacked by two ruffians, one of whom gave him a thrust with a dirk (which fortunately but pierced his cloak) whilst the other carried off a pocket-book containing seventy Dollars in cash. This, gentlemen of the police, is what we assert as positive fact, and is not an old woman's story as you intimated of some other accounts which have appeared in the city gazettes putting our citizens on their guard against the apparently irremediable danger of walking out at night.

CRIMINAL COURT—March 11th.

The State vs. Louis Gayarré, } Murder—This case began on Thursday last, the 5th inst. The Jury yesterday morning at 8 o'clock brought in a verdict of manslaughter, and a recommendation to the Judge, on account of the aggravating circumstances of the case, to inflict the maximum of the penalty awarded by law.

From the Mobile Commercial Register.

MR. EDITOR—Please to give notice that the bodies of three men supposed to have been drowned, were found afloat on the north side of Dauphin Island on the 10th inst.—One of them had on a blue cloth coat and vest and mixed pantaloons—with $5 25 in money in his pocket—another supposed to be a man by the name of Dawson—had on a blue frock coat and pantaloons, with 62½ cents in change in his pocket and a watch the case of which is composed of [illegible]. The third had a blue cloth coat and pantaloons and there was found in his pocket a gold watch; this is supposed to be Robert Carr. The Undersigned has the watch and money. The bodies were buried on the Island above high water mark in the presence of Col. L. D. Vaulien, Lease Turner, and Gonzales. F. RAGGY.

From the Key West Register 19th Feb.

The Telegraph.—We have heretofore taken the liberty of calling the attention of our readers to this interesting subject. Insurance companies and merchants who are engaged in the commerce of the Gulf of Mexico, would undoubtedly derive great advantage from the establishment of a Telegraph at Sand Key. It is well known that all vessels going to and from Pensacola, Mobile, New-Orleans, &c. make that Key Light-House, and frequently pass within speaking distance. The gentleman who resides at Sand Key, Major John R. FLAHERTY has kindly offered, if furnished with the necessary signals which will be done as soon as they can be obtained from Charleston, to attend to the Telegraph, and from his known respectability and attention to business the commercial world would be greatly benefitted by his services. Vessels passing that point can communicate any information whatever (by means of Flag signals,) which will be immediately forwarded for publication in the KEY WEST REGISTER, which means underwriters and others can often obtain information of incalculable advantage to themselves, and others can be informed of their friends passing this important point on their voyage to or from the several Ports on the Gulf of Mexico. It is hoped that all masters of vessels will avail themselves of this method of conveying information.

Longevity.—We frequently hear of the longevity of the inhabitants of colder climates than our own, but we think the subjoined statement, with which we have been furnished by one of the parties, will go far to establish the claims of our warmer latitudes and Charleston especially, to this distinction, and general salubrity. A commission of lunacy was recently held here to enquire whether or not a lady, a native of Charleston, who emigrated to this city in the year 1766, who has been a resident ever since, and is now 86 years of age, was of sound mind.

They were unanimously summoned as Jurors, but not sworn, the average of whose ages was 61 years and one month. Of this number there were three native of Charleston, four of the other states, and five Europeans. The shortest term of residence in Charleston of any one of them has been 28 years and the longest 55.

Of the 12 gentlemen that constituted the Jury, notwithstanding that there were four under 50 years of age, yet the average of their ages was 60. Six were natives of Charleston, one of New-England, and five Europeans. The shortest term of residence in Charleston has been 29 years and the longest 48.

Of the three Commissioners who presided at the trial, the average of their ages was 50 years and the average ages of the whole 24 Jurors and 3 commissioners was 40 years 7 months and 17 days, notwithstanding that eleven of the number had not attained that age.

Those facts demostrate very strongly the adoptation of our climate to health. But the weekly reports of our Board of Health, establish the general salubrity of Charleston in nearly as forcible and perhaps in a more striking manner. During the last month there were two deaths of 70; and of 72 four between 70 and 80; two of 90, and one of 95, which is one fifth of the whole number of persons dying between 70 and 95 years of age. We believe that this proportion is without parallel in the records of longevity.—Southern Pat.

John Howell.—In one of the streets of the modern Athens, is a small shop, filled with various antiques and curiosities, but himself the greatest curiosity of the whole, is to be found John Howell an individual who furnishes a striking instance, among many others, that real genious and talent will spring up under the most unfavorable circumstances, and surmount, by perseverance, the most formidable obstacles. Bred originally a bookbinder, the child of poverty toil, and hardships, his active and inquisitive mind was nevertheless continually on the alert to gain information, often snatching hours from his regular sleep to devote to the acquisition of knowledge, and poring over books while others spent their leisure hours in idleness. John is an antiquary, a biographer, a mechanic, a historian, and a man of virtue; and it is no uncommon thing to see him surrounded by some of the most celebrated literary men of the day. It was he who may be said to have given the first idea of the various military memoirs which have been published lately, by suggesting and editing for the press, from the recital of the individual himself, the "Journal of a Soldier of the 71st regiment." His next works were, "The Life and Adventures of John Nicol, mariner," and "An Essay on the War Galleys of the Ancients;" to illustrate which work, he constructed an admirable model of an ancient galley, which is now placed in the museum of the Society of Scottish Antiquaries. His last work, just published, is "The Life and Adventures of Alexander Selkirk," the original of Robinson Crusoe. By the most patient and minute research into every document calculated to throw light on the subject, he has given a true and authentic narrative of the life of this singular person, of which it is no small praise to say, that it possesses a deep interest of adventure and suffering, little inferior to the fictitious history of De Foe, a work which every body has read, and at the magic sound of which a thousand boyish associations, of the most delightful sort, are called up to the recollection.—Scotsman.

A French drama in five acts, entitled "The Spy," and founded upon Mr. Cooper's novel of that name, was performed for the first time on the 5th Dec. last, at the Royal theatre of Odeon, in Paris. It had full success.

The Wife of two Husbands.—The following curious anecdote is given in the Quotidienne that arrived on Tuesday.—Some years ago an inhabitant of Madrid, who had been reduced by misfortune to state of indigence, thought fit to leave his country for America, in the hope of mending his fortune. He left a wife at Madrid, to whom he afterwards transmitted several sums of money, by means of a mutual friend, to whose charge she was left. By and by the remittances ceased, and the wife received an official notice of her husband's death. The husband in the mean time, received an official notice of the death of his wife, and in his grief for her loss, entered a convent. Years rolled away—the rebellion in America broke out—the months were banished—and the afflicted husband was compelled to return to Spain. On his return to Madrid what was his surprise to meet with his wife! She was again married. It appeared that his friend had embezzled some of the remittances, and, to avoid explanation, had contrived to persuade each party of the other's decease. [illegible] had, subsequently [illegible] the celebration of [illegible] marriage with no small difficulty. An investigation will take place to ascertain whether one or other of the parties has not acted willingly: and, in the mean time, the husband has been sent to a convent, and the wife has retired to a nunnery.

The Pains of this Lower World.—There are 10,000 schoolmasters in New-England, now in active employment. If each one should flog ten scholars this winter, there would be 100,000 souls [illegible] an amount of pain, when put together, sufficient to kill 10,000 jackassess, will have been afflicted—that is, one jackass to a schoolmaster. The shame felt on these capital occasions, in the aggregate, would amount to only one quarter per cent. on the number of schoolars punished; and the stubborness and desperation caused by the punishments would be enough to sink the United States Navy.—Boston Mel.
