[illegible] PRINTER.

MONDAY MORNING, JAN. 13, 1834.

FOR GOVERNOR
J. B. DAWSON.
FOR MAYOR
JOHN K. HOLLAND.

The yesterday's Northern Mail failed beyond Mobile.

The election for State Printer is fixed for to-day. If we consider the scruples [illegible] attention with which we have discharged the duties of the station; if we credit the [illegible] that have been passed upon our fidelity and promptitude in executing the trust not only by many members of both Houses, but likewise by the Secretary of State, we cannot but anticipate that our claims will be again favorably received.

It should be borne in mind by the legislature that for two months past we have had to perform the most burthensome work done during the whole session. This should weigh in our favor.

We disclaim all intention to wound the feelings or injure the character of Mr. C. W. Duffy, in our article of Friday last. If any such construction has been placed, we regret it, never having had any such object in view.

The Siamese Twins have arrived in this city, and are now exhibiting at the Planter's Hotel. Those wonderful prodigies are well worth attention, and we doubt not that they will find it much to their account that they have visited us.

The Philadelphia Sentinel publishes a letter from General [illegible] of the United States Senate, contradicting the report that he is in favor of a National Convention of the party attached to the present administration. The Sentinel, however, makes the following remarks: "But while General M'Kean differs from his democratic brethren as to the most eligible mode of nominating candidates for the presidency, the opponents of Gen. Jackson will find themselves greatly mistaken, if they calculate on seeing him arrayed in opposition to the national administration."

La Belle Nature.—This inimitable painting now exhibiting in our city deserves the generous support of the public, as a specimen of the perfection which the arts have attained. The subject is a lovely female—one of those cast in nature's finest mould—in whose countenance is blended with a felicity at once beautiful and striking, the beaming intelligence of the mind with simplicity and innocence. The beholder is enraptured with the tout ensemble, and feels a peculiar sensation of pleasure in scanning the countenance which speaks in looking thought a language pure and unsullied.

To do justice to the merit of the performance would beggar description, for the eye has the faculty of appreciating beauties which the mind lacks words to describe.

We shall not attempt so difficult a task, feeling our own inability and appreciating the real merit of the production; but would, by this cursory notice, invite the public attention, upon our own faith and responsibility, and suggest to them the claims which it has to be patronised.

Our old favorite, Miss Placide, made her debut for the first time since her return from Europe, on Saturday evening last in the character of Julia in Sheridan Knowles' Hunchback. We have no time now to comment particularly upon her performance. All we can say is, that it was a chaste piece of acting, and fully sustained the reputation she has acquired.

We must notice, though briefly, the excellence of Messrs. Pearson, Barrett and Thorne, and Mrs. Russell, in the several characters assigned them. We decidedly consider the Master Walter as Pearson's chef d'oeuvre. The ranting and stage trickery which he unfortunately infuses in his other characters is very judiciously omitted in this.

To night Mrs. Austin, whose syren tones have been so celebrated [illegible]

[illegible] Concordia Intelligencer that General [illegible] has been honored by his fellow-citizens with a dinner. It is represented as being the most respectable and numerous one ever given to any man in the Parish.—Col. Robert H. Crain, assisted by Carey H. Blanchard, Esq. presided. S. A. Bellio and W. R. Lockie, acted as vice-presidents.

Gen. Walker is a worthy man, and deserves the highest compliments from his constituents. We regret our inability to give his excellent address upon the occasion, in this day's paper. It does honor to his head and his heart. He concluded it by offering the following toast:

"The Sovereign People—Their will, expressed or implied, should be the guide of their Representatives in the discharge of their public duties."

(COMMUNICATED.)
MRS. AUSTIN.

This celebrated Vocalist makes her appearance on Monday evening, in Shakspeare's beautiful and imaginative character of Ariel, which is said to be perfectly represented. [illegible] notices, which we have [illegible] in the New York papers on her quitting that city, [illegible] to believe that the lady is a great favorite in the [illegible] cities of the Union.—We understand she is engaged but for a limited number of nights, and returns to New York previous to the close of the Theatrical season. [illegible] of Ariel has been performed by Mrs. Austin upwards of one hundred and fifty times. The character of Cinderella, in which she is said to be unrivalled, and of which she is the original representative in this country, has been represented by her two hundred and fifty times. We look forward to a musical treat of no common description.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.

From Portugal.—Captain Applint, of brig Cybele, arrived yesterday, informs us that Don Pedro's forces in the vicinity of St. Ubes had been entirely defeated by those of Don Miguel, and the vanquished had taken shelter on board the shipping. The Miguelites were hourly expected at St. Ubes. The accounts from Lisbon are the same as those by the way of England.

By the ship Europa, arrived at New York, from Liverpool, dates to the 16th, and London to the 15th November have been received. The following are the most important articles:

ENGLAND.

There is no political news worth noticing. The Duke of Devonshire has twice tendered his resignation of the Lord Chamberlain of the King's Household, but it has been declined. His Grace is absent on the Continent, travelling for his health.

BELGIUM.

The King has returned to his capital from Paris, and opened his Chambers with a speech. He is silent as to the commercial state and prospects of his Kingdom; wisely so, it is said, because every thing is gloomy.

FRANCE.

The vintage of the present year is said to be much better than the last, but still fall short of an ordinary product by [illegible]

SPAIN.

The papers by this arrival give us additional reason to believe that the cause of the Queen Regent, of Spain, in support of her daughter's title to the throne, will be sustained by the French Government. It is reported that the Queen's mother has been compelled to leave Madrid, but there is no confirmation of the news. It has been also said that the French Army of observation had crossed the Spanish frontier for her relief. This, however, was also a matter of doubt; for it does not appear that her case was desperate. The recent movements of General Sarsfield were unknown, but he had not been beaten, nor had he gone over to the Carlists. El Pastor and General Chatagnon had received a check, and the Carlist force to which they were opposed, amounted to [illegible] but St. Sebastian had not surrendered.

The country, at various places, is up in arms, but Madrid is tranquil. Merino, the intrate, is said to occupy the whole road from the capital to Bayonne, but couriers pass without much interruption. The Carlists are entering Spain [illegible] but the Constitutionalists were also returning home.

On the whole, however, the aspect of affairs, on the part of the Queen Regent, is by no means flattering, unless she obtains an effectual succor from foreign powers. One [illegible] French accounts states that Don Carlos has entered [illegible] and [illegible] he has understood the necessity of giving [illegible] by the example of Don Miguel loosing his kingdom by proxy, has determined him on trying his fortune in person. The royalists will henceforth have a centre [illegible] direction.

The London Morning Herald gives the following summary of present condition of affairs in Spain, which, for the [illegible] we deem to be correctly delineated:

"The civil war in Spain assumes every day a sterner [illegible] and the calculations of its ultimate issue are now a matter of greater uncertainty than ever. That the balance [illegible] to the side of the insurgents is confessed on all [illegible] still increasing success, though small and partial, yet progressive, contrast strongly with the means of [illegible] prepared by the Queen's government, which appear to be feeble, inert, and in some degree, already paralyzed by the greatness of the obstacles opposed to them. The intelligence from the Peninsula, contained in Paris papers of Monday, does not in any respect alter the unfavorable aspect [illegible] these affairs in the North were presented by [illegible] of some days preceding. By the [illegible] Generals Sarsfield and Wall, upon whom [illegible]

[illegible] in the whole country, is wavering; while [illegible] remains in the [illegible] of the Queen, [illegible] is supposed to be besieged at Logrono, [illegible] becoming more critical every day, in consequence of the spirit of disaffection which evinces daily upon the increase in the town and its neighbourhood.

The Curate Merino is in possession of all the country between Madrid and Burgos, excepting the whole of the roads [illegible]

The supposition that the waiting the time given to the Carlists at Vittoria to surrender, is weakened, when it is known that the place had already expired by some days, and that if he were not himself besieged, he ought to have already commenced aggressive operations. The insurgents were using every effort to concentrate their forces upon Miranda, where the great stand was to be made against the Queen's troops. It is affirmed that Don Carlos has been proclaimed in the town of Ocagna, and even at Aranjuez. On the other hand, the Liberals are arming in several places. Murillo, Captain General of Gallicia, has re-established the ancient militia, known by the name of Milicias Honradas. It is, under another name, the same thing as the Christinos Volunteers of Catalonia.

The other provinces of Spain, and particularly Arragon and Castile, where a movement was most expected, are perfectly quiet. Some disturbances had taken place in Gallicia, but they were speedily repressed, and Morillo answers for the tranquillity of that province.

Reports were again renewed of the French Government having determined upon sending an army of 30,000 men to the assistance of the Queen; and it was added that the project, having been communicated to the Ministers of the other great Powers at Paris, had obtained their concurrence with the exception of that of Russia. The reason assigned for the step is the danger to be apprehended to France from a prolonged civil war in Spain. The whole, however, is very improbable, and of the same stamp would seem to be rumors from Madrid of serious divisions in the Queen's Cabinet, even extending to threats of impeachment being thrown out by the liberal portion of it against their colleagues M. M. Zea and Cruz. The capital and the country south of it, by all accounts, remains tranquil."

PORTUGAL.

Our advices by these papers are no later from Lisbon than November 2d, inclusive. They are no dates have been received before. Party spirit was running high in the Portuguese capital. It was believed that affairs would proceed with more domestic harmony, if foreigners, both ashore and afloat, would cease their officious intermeddling. Recruits from England, and also from Belgium, were frequently arriving, and were sent off to the army, in fine spirits, at Santarem. Orders have been received in England, however, directing the agents of Don Pedro to enlist no more recruits. We presume, therefore, that the contest is considered in effect to have been decided.

HOLLAND.

Dutch papers are to November 17. It is stated in one of them, and with an air of authority, that the mission of Prince Schwartzenberg to the King, whatever its special objects might have been, had met, at the hands of his Majesty, with entire success. The Prince himself had just left the Hague upon his return to Berlin, bearing with him a snuff box set with brilliants, and other marks of the favor and approbation of the King. Of the exact nature of the Envoy's propositions as regards the Belgian dispute we are uninformed; but their tenor is understood to be very moderate and conciliatory. There is as yet, however, no palpable manifestation in the Dutch councils of a better disposition to accommodate than has yet appeared.

The Journal of the Hague says that there is no truth whatever in the absurd report spread by a French Journal of the union of part of Luxemburg with the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine. It denies that any arrangement has been made, and affirms that Germany will not abandon any of its rights over the whole of Luxemburg.

RUSSIA.

A letter from Pultawa, in the Ukraine, presents a deplorable picture of the extremity to which the population of that fertile part of Russia is reduced by the total failure of the crops. The inhabitants have given themselves up to despair, being obliged to feed upon roots. A great number have perished through exhaustion. Corn, which is so scarce, that it may be said there is none at all, has risen to an excessive price, it being more than fifteen times its ordinary value.

Still later advices from St. Petersburgh, reaching to the 1st of November, show that the famine spoken of in a preceding paragraph is by no means confined to the province of Ukraine.

Russia is suffering, at the present moment, to a dreadful extent, from the total failure of the harvest in many parts of the empire. We form some conception of the extent of the consequent scarcity from some of the Imperial ordinances contained in the St. Petersburgh papers, which reach to the 14th (26th) of October.

By a resolution of the Ministerial Committee every kind of corn is allowed to be conveyed free of duty, and even in foreign vessels, from one Russian port to another, and this permission is to remain in force not only for the present but even for the whole ensuing year.

Adventures of a French Orphan among the Arabs.—The Semaphore of Marseilles gives a letter from Algiers, dated the 22d ult. containing the following episode in the late military excursion to Blida:

"It will be recollected that a settler and his wife were massacred by the Arabs in the rear of the army. They had their daughter with them, a girl of about eleven years of age, but of whom, though every search was made, no traces could be found; and no doubt was entertained of her having been conveyed by the barbarians back to the mountains. She, however, has returned to Algiers, owing her safety to her own presence of mind. The following narrative of her escape is from her own recital. She was seized by the hair of the head, and the inexorable ytagan was raised to strike her, when the brigands suddenly observed the driver of the wagon, from which she and her parents had been taken, running to conceal himself in the bushwood. They instantly abandoned their prey for this new object of their ferocity, thinking no doubt, that they should easily find the destitute child on their return. She seized the propitious moment, and hastened to hide herself in the marsh, and from her hiding-place watched the Arabs seeking the man who had escaped them. When they were at a distance, she regained sufficient courage to come out, and give a last embrace to her murdered parents, and was not deterred from performing this act of filial affection, either by the dangers to which she was exposed, or by the revolting sight of the mutilated bodies of her father and mother. Alarmed, however, by some noise, she again plunged into the marsh, and having wandered about for several hours, found herself near an Arab hut, and sat down exhausted. She had not been long in this position, when a child of about her own age, came out of the hut, and, inspired by Providence, the orphan threw herself upon its neck; the Arab child answered her caresses. In a few minutes she was surrounded by Arab women, who wept over her tears of commiseration. Their maternal feelings dictated to them their duties on the occasion, and they endeavored to conceal her but the husbands returned and she was discovered.—These barbarians reproved their wives for granting hospitality to a christian; and one of them had the brutality to throw an iron bar at the head of his wife, because she gave two eggs to the famished child. She, however, preserved, and remained with the tribe two days, submitting to her fate with patience and resignation. The murderers, in fact, reflected that the exasperated French might again return to take vengeance, and that the sparing their infant prisoner would, perhaps, be a means of appeasing the wrath of their enemies. At length, a Moor, while the Arabs were absent, got possession of the orphan, and having concealed her in one of the baskets slung across his mule, brought her on the 16th of September, safe into Algiers. Immediately on her arrival she was taken to General Viorol who bestowed upon her the most anxious care. Her return becoming known, she was the general object of curiosity and attention; every one wished to hear from her own mouth the narrative of her sufferings, to which we have not added one single word. Mr. Sapperty, director of the Caratine Hospital, has adopted the child, whose name is Lucin Buretto, and will be to her as a second father; his kind treatment will, no doubt, soon alleviate the pains she has suffered. The officers of the garrison have opened a subscription, the product of which is to be deposited in the Savings Bank, at Paris, where it will accumulate to form a dowry for the Orphan of Algiers."

PHRENOLOGY ILLUSTRATED.—A foreign journal relates that among a large assemblage of persons who were invited to dine at the chief hotel of Valence, was an eminent physician of Lyons who devoted much time to the study of the peculiar doctrines of Gall and Spurzheim. He was attacked upon the subject of his favorite hobby which he defended with much good humour. Several persons requested the Doctor, at the close of the desert, to pronounce his opinion on their faculties and qualifications, and much surprise was expressed at the accuracy of his verdicts.—One individual, however, stood aloof, annoying the company by his sneers at their credulity, and insulting the Doctor by accusations of charlatanism. "I will defy any man living," said he, "to infer the character and conduct of a man from the organization of his skull." The Doctor made no reply, but appeared considerably agitated.

"As if it were possible" continued the stranger, "for man's thoughts to raise bosses upon a bone."

"For your sake," replied the physician, "I trust that it is not; for if phrenology have any power to interpret the hand writing of the Almighty, you are one of the greatest villians in existence;—a thief and an assassin!" An outcry of indignation was immediately raised in the room. The stranger proposed the ejection of the phrenologist through the window, when the uproar and consternation were checked by the sudden entrance of the master of the hotel.

"Gentlemen" said he, "I am sorry to acquaint you, that a great criminal is harbored among you.—The police are at the door, having information that an individual concerned in a robbery of plate, which was effected last night in a neighboring town, has been dining at this ordinary."

Every eye was turned upon the furious stranger, and in a few minutes he was in the custody of the police, the stolen plate having been found concealed in his baggage. But what was the amazement of the company, when he was detected as the celebrated Robert St. Clair, the accomplice of Damons Dupin executed for the murder of an [illegible] and his wife at Montmorency! St. Clair, after escaping from the galleys at Rochefort, had continued to escape justice, by spreading that he had been found murdered on the Turkish frontier. After some days of confinement in the dungeons of Valence, he made confession, was tried, condemned—and guillotined.

COMMERCIAL.

HAVRE, Nov. 10.

There have entered during the week, two vessels from New York, one from Norfolk and one from Baltimore.

A single vessel only has sailed—for New Orleans; but as the wind is getting round to the north, many are preparing to leave.

Cotton.—We have received 1049 bales from N. York, 635 from N. Orleans, 371 from Virginia and 323 Brazils, together, 2741.

The sales of the week amount to 2263 bales, as follows:

207 bales Louisiana ordinary and middling up to fine,	105f to 135f
119 bales Georgia, short staple, (O. S.) middling to good,	105f to 121f
329 bales Mobile good ordinary to middling,	105f to 103f
173 bales Alabama and Tennessee Ditto	100f to 103f
130 bales Pernambuco, fine	141f

The sales have been made with difficulty, and the want of confidence in the market is renewed. The last advices from the United States seem to have determined some holders to realize. The prices have receded from the point they had attained, and the market has been heavy for some days. The parcels sold have been done at a fall of 1 to 2 per cent from last week's prices.—We have received about 1000 bales New Georgia from New York, of fine quality. Two or three cargoes from Charleston and Savannah are daily expected.—We have also just had an arrival from New Orleans, with 300 bales of the new crop; the quantity not yet known. These are to be had at a reduction from last week's prices.

The stock is about 40,000 bales of all sorts.

COURT OF PROBATES—PARISH OF ST. BERNARD.

BY virtue of an order from the Hon. the Court of Probates in and for the parish of St. Bernard, and with the consent of all the parties interested, will be sold, at public auction, by the undersigned judge of the parish aforesaid, on Saturday the 15th day of February 1834, on the premises, at noon, the following property belonging (for one half portion,) to the succession of Edouard Mac[illegible], late deceased, to wit:

A SUGAR PLANTATION, with all the buildings and improvements thereon, situated in the Parish of St. Bernard, at about four leagues from the city of New Orleans measuring about ten arpents front on the river Mississippi, by forty arpents deep more or less, bounded on the upper side by Mr. Louis Toutant Beauregard's property and on the other side by property which belongs or belonged to Mr. Paydras, as well as a certain cypress swamp situated in the back side of said plantation, and all the cattle, horses, animals, and all the moveable property appertaining to said plantation, and also all the twenty-two following slaves, to wit:—Abner, Mary, Ben, Cato, Charles François, John, July, and her two children, Louise and Constance, Narcisse, Joseph, Sally and her two children Maria and Louise, Syvie, Tom, Hector, Clora, Sally, Selina, and Elizabeth alias Betsy, and four hundred shares in the capital stock of the Union Bank of Louisiana, secured on said property and slaves. The whole will be sold in one lot; the age, sexes, qualities and defects, of said slaves will be made known on the day of sale.

Conditions:—The purchaser thereof shall bind himself to pay to the Union Bank of Louisiana, in deduction of the price of his adjudication, the sum of twenty thousand dollars due by the sellers on the first day of March 1834 for having borrowed the sum on the credit of their shares in said Bank; and the balance of the price of said adjudication shall be paid: One fourth in March 1835; one fourth in March 1836; one fourth in March 1837, and one fourth in March 1838, in notes by portions endorsed to the satisfaction of the testamentary executor of said succession, bearing an interest at the rate of five per cent per annum from the date of the adjudication until due, payable at the domicil of the Union Bank in New Orleans, with mortgage on said property until final payment of the capital and interests. Said notes if not punctually paid when due, shall bear an interest of ten per cent per annum, from the time of their being due, until final payment. The said purchaser shall take the reversion of the mortgage given in favor of said Union Bank, to secure the aforesaid shares, and also to secure the payment of the sums borrowed on the credit of said shares; and the said purchaser shall bind himself to furnish to the said bank additional security so to secure his aforesaid 400 shares, and to cause the mortgage which exists on sixteen slaves in favor of the said Union Bank, to secure the aforesaid 400 shares, to be raised and annulled, in as much as the aforesaid sixteen slaves, are not to be comprised in the above sale.

And on Monday the 17th day of February 1834, by virtue of the above order, will be sold at public auction, by Francis Dutillet, public auctioneer, at Hewlett's Coffee House, in the city of New Orleans, at noon, the following slaves and shares belonging to the aforesaid succession, to wit: Jack, a negro man, about 40 years old, good axe and good field hand; Tom Brooks, a negro man, about 27 years old, good axe and good field hand; John Cane, a mulatto man, about 26 years old, good cartman and good field hand; Solomon Johnson, a negro man, about 28 years old, a field hand; Melite, a negro woman, about 40 years old, with her three children, Edmund, a negro boy, about 8 years old, Stephen, a negro boy, about 6 years old, and Jenny, a girl about 2 years old; Sabina Snowden, a negro woman, about 23 years old, with her boy Thomson, about 1 year old; Martha, a negro woman, about 23 years old, and Ann, an orphan girl, about 3 years old. Eleven shares in the merchants Insurance Company of New Orleans, on which Thirty Dollars per share are paid in.

Conditions: The shares shall be sold for cash, and the slaves with full guarantee, shall be sold at one year's credit, from the date of adjudication, in notes endorsed to the satisfaction of the testamentary executor, and payable at the domicil of the Union Bank in New Orleans, with mortgage thereon until final payment. Said notes, if not punctually paid when due, shall bear an interest at the rate of ten per cent per annum from their being due until final payment. (signed) OCTAVE S. ROUSSEAU, jan 11 Judge.

By the charter of the Union Bank, all obligations contracted on credit of shares, may be renewed from year to year, until twenty years, by paying each year one twentieth of the capital, and an interest of seven per cent per annum, on the amount renewed.

LATELY ARRIVED FOR A LIMITED PERIOD,

A novelty of the utmost importance.

THE DUHERTISIAN SYSTEM OF WRITING,
TAUGHT BY THE REAL INVENTOR.
Academy No. 45, Camp street, (corner of Gravier street,) New Orleans.

☞ Any WRITING, however deformed, illegible, cramped, or vulgar, no matter how indifferent and confirmed it may be, will, in the course of SIX EASY LESSONS of one hour each, be reformed to a beautiful, free, expeditious and permanent hand, suited to Commercial Interests, the Counting House, and the Merchant's Ledger, and to every purpose of Life and Business; while Ladies are taught a neat and fashionable hand, truly elegant, by Mr. Duhertis, President of the Systematic Writing and Short-hand Institution, London, Dublin and Edinburgh; Inventor and Patentee of the new ALPHEGRAPHIC process, for producing any style of penmanship. Sanctified by the approbation of thousands of the most distinguished of America's sons; and continue to

Point out its worth with an impartial eye
And uft us [illegible] banner to the sky

The system is capable of correcting the most confirmed habits at any period of life, even to 60 years of age and upwards.

[illegible] taught [illegible] whereby [illegible] to take down lectures, sermons, [illegible] at the bar, &c. but also extend [illegible] refining [illegible] the conception.

[illegible] days, Thursdays, and Saturdays devoted exclusively to the instruction of Ladies, and received at any hour from 10 o'clock a. m. to 2 p. m. Gentlemen on the other days and from 5 to 9 every evening.

☞ The Merchants and others whose stay in the city is very limited, can be finished in one or two days if required.

[illegible] who have never written are taught an elegant hand in twelve lessons.

[illegible] of improvements can be seen by applying to Mr. D. at his Academy. [illegible]

☞ The following testimonials are a selection from many others in favor of Mr. Duhertis's system of teaching the art of Writing, during his practice in Europe.

The late Sir Walter Scott expressed his approbation of the Duhertisian System of Penmanship thus: "After [illegible] I cannot sufficiently express my admiration of this ingenious invention for assisting the art of Penmanship, yet I shall not hesitate to say, it will prove highly useful in that purpose."

[illegible] the learned and eloquent Lord [illegible] remarked, that "The System of Mr. Duhertis [illegible] a very extraordinary and unequal [illegible] in the way of Penmanship, and deserves the gratitude of the country."

Earl Grey has observed "That the new method of Writing introduced by Mr. Duhertis shall not want my need of praise, convinced as I am of its vast importance to all classes of society.

The celebrated O'Connell, M P styled "Ireland's Liberator," declared that the Duhertisian System of Penmanship will create a greater revolution in the Art of Writing than any circumstance which has occurred since the invention of the Rolling Press. It is highly worthy the patronage of the people."

Sir Francis Burdett stated his opinion thus: "It is utterly impossible for language to express, or eloquence sufficiently to extol the surprising efficacy of this incomparable invention for giving ease, elegance and freedom to the hand writing."

The scientific nobleman, Lord John Russel, in recommending the new system of writing, says, "Of all the improvements in the Art of Writing that have been presented to the world, the new system introduced by Mr. Duhertis is incomparably the best; I have witnessed its astonishing effects in reforming bad habits in so many instances, that I think the art is hardly susceptible of any further improvement."
