Commercial.

NEW-ORLEANS, FRIDAY NIGHT, April 23, 1841.

We have to-day to chronicle no change in the market. There was an additional supply of cotton, equal to about one-half of the quantity received yesterday, which was taken at the prices of yesterday, and a small quantity of sugar was sold at a slight advance. Flour continues from our last prices, and we hear of no sales. Molasses is very dull, and we have no sales to report. Exchange is nominally at the rates of yesterday, and we have no sales to report. We have no statistical information of any much value to the reader, which induces us to dispense with it.

Advices from the upper country, received this evening, give a favorable account of the crops, and the prospect is that the quantity will be very large. The selling interest seem to be quite firm in their views, and we hear of no sales of consequence at less than last quotations, and some sellers are inclined to think that the quotations will be exceeded. We consider, however, that the selling interest have no strength, and that there is every chance for a decline. The weather is cool, and has been so for some days past, which is very favorable to the growing crop.

Our receipts from the country, since our last, have been very small, and we have no sales to report.

COTTON.—Advices from Liverpool to the 23d March, received to-day, show a very moderate demand, which partial advances in the market, which we have noticed in our previous quotations, have not been sufficient to induce the trade to go beyond the actual requirements of the day, consequently the business done has been very limited, and the market has not been quoted higher than last week, although there has been no material change in the quotations. The sales of the week are estimated at 30,000 bales, of which 5,000 were taken for exportation, and 2,000 bales for speculation. The sales of American cotton have been 20
