The Norfolk Beacon complains, with great justice, of the great length of the political productions of the day:

"The great end of publication is virtually lost sight of in such communications. No business man can read them—it is certain that not one fiftieth part of professed politicians get through them. Great length is, in some degree, incompatible with intellectual excellence. The essence of ordinary questions is reducible within a small compass. We could mention three political productions of the last three weeks, which if printed in a similar manner, would more than equal the contents of one of the bulky volumes of the first edition of Marshall's Life of Washington."

We learn from the Washington Globe, that the Hon. John Ruggles has been elected a senator from Maine, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of the Hon. Peleg Sprague, for six years from the 4th of March next.

The vote stood as follows:

John Ruggles (Administration)	108
George Evans (opposition)	64

FANCY BALL IN WASHINGTON.

The Washington correspondent of the Charleston Mercury, gives the following sprightly account of a fancy ball at the seat of the national government:

"For a fortnight past, the main topic of conversation among the fashionables, has been a Fancy Ball, to be given by Mrs. Waithman, a lady whose name is familiar to all who have resided in this city. Last night the ball took place. It was a sparkling and sprightly affair. Every one was happy, and there was much rivalry in the display of it. It had been previously announced, that no one would be admitted who did not appear in a fancy dress, although the numerous applications for exemption led to a considerable relaxation of the rule which had been laid down. At the door of the ante-room, stood a minister of ceremony, who demanded the style and title of the visiter; and some of the styles and titles were strange enough, and had, if any, only a very occult connexion with the appearance of the individual. The guests were then conducted into another room, at the head of a long avenue of beauty, in which was posted the lady of the mansion. Through this avenue the visiters had to pass, subjected to the gaze and remarks of those who had been fortunate enough to arrive early, and this process was a great march stirrer. There must have been [illegible] hundred persons present, although I am informed invitations were issued for twice that number. [illegible] of the number were either in their ordinary dress or only wore some badge which might be a ticket of admission, in case the rule had been rigidly enforced.—Some very excellent characters were present, and at the head of these, deserve to be mentioned an Indian group representing two Pawnee Chiefs and a Squaw. These were admirable conceptions, painted and decorated to the life; and so well had they been disciplined, (the chief personage having been for some time among the Indians,) that they preserved the consistency and keeping of their characters throughout the whole of the evening. The Squaw appeared absolutely Indian. She sat on the floor, smoked, (lavender) followed in the rear submissively, was silent, and unmovable of countenance. When asked to dance, she pointed to the Chief, indicating that she could only dance with him. There was another Indian female character present, and their meeting was in excellent keeping. Mr. Calhoun and Mr. Preston were there, in their proper costume, and Miss Calhoun was the "observed of all observers." The fancy dresses were splendid; some of the style dresses were from the Theatre. Hamlet and Horatio were there. I believe there were two Hamlets. There was a Fool Fry, there was a Jew and a Grand Inquisitor. There were Turks and Greeks, Romans and Franks; there was a Chinese who danced in his slippers, and Scotch Chieftains, whose pistols wore awkward appendages to the waltz. The claymore, the tartan, the kilt, and other elements of the Highland costume, were new, and excited admiration. There were Anne Page, Cherry and Fair Star, Liberty, all the known goddesses of the Pantheon, and a number of new ones. In short, the whole was delightful, and went off in a most agreeable manner, but the company did not go off until two or three hours after mid night."

The editor of the Richmond Compiler exclaims with reference to the French question:

"Are we to follow the plan laid down by the editor of the National Gazette, and forget all the benefits conferred upon us by our ancestors? Forbid it gratitude! Forbid it every feeling worthy of human nature!"

Forbid it also a pretender and canter, who cannot comprehend the case.—[Nat. Gaz.

LOUISIANA LEGISLATURE.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.
Sitting of Friday 6th instant.

Trial of John R. Grymes.

[Continuation.]

John L. Lewis sworn on the part of the accused, deposes as follows:

1st question. Are you not clerk of the District Court of the 1st district, sitting in this city?

Answer. Yes—I am.

2nd question. Do you remember having seen the accused in the morning of the 3d inst. Relate the time and place and all circumstances within your knowledge?

Answer. On the morning of the 3d Feb. Mr. Grymes came into the office of witness three or four minutes after the hour of ten by the town clock, and recounted to witness the difficulty which had just taken place between him and Mr Labranche.

3d question. What were your reasons of knowing the hour exactly?

Answer. The court opens at 10 o'clock. The judge is very exact about the time of opening court, and that morning took his seat as the clock was striking the hour of 10, and Mr. Grymes came in about four or five minutes after the judge had taken his seat—The first case on the docket of that morning was one of Mr. Grymes, and he came to attend to it—The building in which the court is held is adjoining the one which contains the clock, and may be heard distinctly in the court room, as it strikes the hour of the day.

4th question. Is not the distance from the Hall of the house of Representatives to the Court House, nearly the whole length of the city and does it not require some minutes to walk it, and how many about?

Answer. The distance from the Hall of Representatives to the place where the District Court is held, is considerable, and witness think it would take Mr. Grymes, in consequence of his business, about 18 or 20 minutes to walk it.

Thomas Curry, a witness on the part of the accused being sworn deposes as follows:

1st question. Did you see the accused on the morning of the 3d instant, if so state the hour and all the circumstances within your knowledge.

Answer. I met Mr. Grymes on the morning of the 3d inst—Witness left his office, which is near the Branch Bank of the United States, about five minutes before ten o'clock—Mr. Grymes was going down Royal street, towards the district court—met him in about two minutes after witness had left his office—witness came directly to the Supreme Court rooms—the judges had not taken their seats, and it was time that witness heard of the affray.

R. J. Elliot sworn on the part of the accused, deposes as follows:

1st question. At what time on the morning of the 3d of the month did you hear of the occurrence which had taken place between the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the accused?—State fully your knowledge of all the circumstances in relation thereto.

Answer. On the morning of the 3d inst, I heard of the affray between Mr. Grymes, and Mr. Labranche at ten o'clock, and whilst the town clock was striking that hour—a few minutes afterwards, saw Mr. Grymes going up the stairs to the District Court—witness in talking to some one about the affray, asked if it could have happened while the House was in session; but concluded from the hour, that it could not. It was ten o'clock, by the town clock, which governs the courts, &c.

Charles McMillan sworn on the part of the accused, deposes as follows:

1st question. At what time on the morning of the third of this month did you hear of the occurrence which had taken place between the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the accused?—state fully your knowledge of all the circumstances in relation thereto.

Answer. I heard of the affray on the morning of the 3d instant, at about ten o'clock—Witness that morning was arguing a case in Probate Court, and at about ten o'clock stopped the argument, and heard of the affray from Mr. Duplessis, Register of Wills—noticed the hour because the question was asked by Mr. Morphy, whether the House was in session or not at the time.—It was ten o'clock by the town clock—but did not look at his own watch—thinks the distance between the Hall of Representatives, and where the Probate Court is held, could be walked in about twelve minutes, without stepping.

John Sibly, sworn on the part of the accused, deposes as follows:

1st question. At what time on the morning of the 3d of this month did you hear of the occurrence which had taken place between the Speaker of the House and the accused—state fully your knowledge of the circumstances in relation thereto.

Answer. I live nearly opposite to the state House—came over about 5 or 10 minutes after ten o'clock and Mr. Lavergne was in the chair, the roll called, and the House proceeding in business.

We have great pleasure in being able to state to the public that an edition of Mr. Gouge's admirable work on Banking is preparing in this city, and will shortly be issued from the press. To render this as extensively useful as possible, it has been printed in small type on a large octavo page in double columns, and will be sold at so low a price as to put it within the reach of persons of even the slenderest means. The object of those who have undertaken this enterprise has been chiefly to diffuse pure correct knowledge and sound principles in relation to the important subject of banking; and we trust that it will meet with a very extensive circulation. It will be published in the course of a fortnight or three weeks.—N. Y. Evg. Post.

The creature's at his dirty work again.

The 'independent' aristocratic members of the United S. Senate have recommenced their factious opposition to the President, by rejecting his nominations of all persons who have been prominent opponents of the United States Bank. On this ground (for there is no other) they rejected, on Tuesday last, the nomination of H. D. Gilpin to the office of Governor of the Territory of Michigan. Mr. Gilpin was last year rejected as a Government Director of the United States Bank, because, there was reason to believe that if he were confirmed, he would faithfully serve the Government, and not be a mere tool of the Bank. Having received the mark by that rejection as an enemy of the United States Bank, he can expect to be confirmed to no office as long as a majority of the Senate are at the beck and nod of that institution. We do not know that we should be much surprised if the Senate should have the indecency, as well as malignity, to reject the nomination of Mr. Taney; and yet it can hardly be expected that they will venture so grossly to outrage public sentiment so recently and strongly expressed. We shall see.—Bid.

MR. BENTON AND THE NATIONAL INTELLIGENCER.

The Intelligencer is pursuing its usual Jesuitical course towards the Missouri Senator. Mr. Benton recently rose in his place and charged the conductors of that print with garbling some of his speeches concerning the Bank of the United States, and suppressing others. His remarks were excluded from the Intelligencer's report of that day's proceedings in the Senate, though they were noticed editorially.

We think the course of the Intelligencer disingenuous and unfair. Unfair, in the injustice displayed towards Mr. Benton in omitting his speeches; and disingenuous, in excluding his notice of it from their columns, and at the same time commenting in terms sufficiently severe on the remarks he thought proper to make.—[Louisville Advertiser.

FROM MOORE'S NEW IRISH MELODIES.

ALONE IN CROWDS TO WANDER ON.

Alone in crowds to wander on,
And feel that all the charm is gone,
Which voices dear and eyes beloved
Shed round us once wher'er we roved;—
This, this the doom must be
Of all who've lov'd and lived to see
The few bright things they thought would stay
For ever near them die away.

Though fairer forms around us throng,
Their smiles to others all belong,
And what that light which dwells alone
Round those the fond heart calls its own.
Where, where the sunny brow?
The long known voice—where are they now?
Thus ask I still, nor ask in vain—
The silence answers all too plain.

Oh, what is Fancy's magic worth,
If all her art cannot call forth
One bliss like those we felt of old,
From lips now mute and eyes now cold!
No, no—her spell is vain—
As soon could she bring back again
Those eyes themselves from out the grave
As wake again one bliss they gave.
