FOR PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

HENRY CLAY.

NEW-ORLEANS:
THURSDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 26, 1843.

The mail failed yesterday from beyond Columbus. We are consequently without further election returns from Pennsylvania.

Some of the locofoco papers, in trying to account for the defeat of the locofocos in Ohio, resort to the supposition that there was more than one "democratic" candidate in each congressional district. The Herald says "from one to five." This is altogether an error. We published, a day or two before the election, a complete list of all the candidates on both sides—and in every district in the state, except the first, where Dr. Duncan was opposed solely by a member of his own party—there were two regularly nominated candidates, a whig and a locofoco, pitted against each other. It is true that the abolitionists had started candidates in most of the districts, but we presume the locofocs are not particularly anxious to claim them as extra democratic candidates. We can help the locofocos to another and more probable explanation of the causes of their defeat.

The people of Ohio, like their brethren throughout the union, are lovers of good order and invincibly opposed to injustice and oppression. When, in 1841, the whig members of the legislature resigned in a body for the purpose of preventing by this last and desperate resource, a most iniquitous distribution of the congressional districts by the dominant party, large numbers of whigs condemned the act, and at the state elections which followed a few weeks after, recorded their disapprobation of such ultra measures by either refraining from voting, or casting their suffrages against their former friends. Hence it was, that CORWIN, Ohio's famous orator, was defeated, and a majority of locofocos were returned to both branches of the legislature. The moral of this result was, however, lost upon locofocoism. The victorious party beheld in their triumph, not simply a censure of the whigs for resigning in mass, but an unqualified approval of their own attempts to district the state without the slightest concession to their opponents. They considered that they had now a carte blanche to perpetrate any act of injustice which might tend to perpetuate their power, and accordingly they proceeded to pass an apportionment bill by which the rights of the whig party were trampled under foot and locofocoism impregnably entrenched, as they thought in fourteen out of the twenty-one districts of the state. But the people recoiled from this oppression, and the events prove that the despotism of faction will not be tolerated whether it emanate from one or the other of the great political parties of the day. The best evidence of the truth of our remarks is the fact that in the very districts which were most hopelessly gerrymandered, the whig game have been most striking and enormous. Witness the Fairfield and Morgan districts where whigs have been elected in the face of apparently heavy locofoco majorities; while in the northern portion of the state which, being strongly whig, locofocoism could not well gerrymander, the vote was light, the interest manifested comparatively trivial, and consequently, the locofocos have absolutely gained in that section of the state, one or two members of the legislature.

An analogous train of reasoning applies with equal force to the result in Pennsylvania—a state in which the congressional apportionment was a still more iniquitous and inequitable than in Ohio, and in which the whigs have gained largely in the very districts carved out by locofocoism for its special advancement. An examination of last year's vote in Pennsylvania shows that, judged by this standard, the whigs ought to have carried five congressional districts—they have succeeded in more than double the number.

The result in both these states is a wholesome admonition to ultra politicians. It offers them an impressive commentary on the expediency and justice of checking a rapacious propensity to promote their immediate ends at the sacrifice of the rights of those whom circumstances have temporarily thrown into the minority.

DUEL.—An affair of honor took place yesterday on the Bayou Road, between two gentlemen of this city.—The terms were, that the parties should be placed at the distance of ten paces from each other, each armed with two pistols, with the privilege of firing between the words one and twenty. One of the parties discharged both of his pistols without effect; the other, after firing one of his pistols, handed the other in his second, declining to fire upon an unarmed adversary.

OTTO MOTTY.—The Council of the Second Municipality have granted permission to this unrivalled equestrian performer, to erect a Circus in St. Charles street opposite the Theatre. He has a splendid company, and we hope he will be properly patronized.

MR. C. W. DUFY, late of the New Orleans Republican, has withdrawn from his part proprietorship and editorship of that paper.

JOSEPH MITCHELL was arrested yesterday by the officers of Second Municipality for stabbing a colored boy named Mr. Louis.

DROWNED.—A negro boy named WILLIAM the property of MADAM MARCHAND was found drowned yesterday opposite the Vegetable Market.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Four Congressional districts in Massachusetts, have nominated delegates to the Locofoco National Convention—all Van Buren men.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT NASHVILLE.—Mr. James F. May, a respectable citizen of Nashville, was killed a few days ago, by being thrown from his barouche.

LOST CHILD.—A child, about four years of age, with light hair, calling herself PATSEY HILL, was found yesterday morning, by one of the Police officers, wandering upon the Levee. As she could not give any account of her residence, she was placed in the Watch-house of the Second Municipality, until identified.

☞ A correspondent of the Picayune—Mr. Pitts—estimates the cotton crop of the present year at 1,300,000 bales. The editors of the Pic, in presenting his article to the public, justly remark that his speculations are novel, and that cotton dealers are fully aware of the value of his judgment. We say ditto to this.

HEALTH OF MOBILE.—We are happy to state, says Tuesday's Advertiser, that the epidemic has very sensibly abated. Yesterday, we learn, that there were not a single interment, and there were not over three or four new cases of yellow fever, as far as we could understand—and most of those of a type that will probably yield to medical treatment. As yet, however, we can give no encouragement to those who have been absent from the city to return.

NAVAL.—The U. S. brig Bazer, Lieut. Commandant BULLUS, from a cruise around the Island of Cuba, arrived at Pensacola, on the 16th inst., she will sail in a few days for Norfolk, for the purpose of being re-coppered.

The U. S. brig Somers, Lieut. Commdt. WEST, sailed from Pensacola, the 16th, for Havana.

ST. LOUIS RACES.—First day—Monday, October 16, 1843—Proprietors purse, $100—mile heats:

James L. Bradley's ch. mare Gomera, 5 years old, by Medoc dam by Arab, 7 0 1 1
Turnbull & Stafford's br bay mare Sally Carr, by Stockholder, dam unknown, 5 years old, 1 0 2 2
B. H. McCarty's bay filly, 4 years old, by Improved Bertrand, dam by Sir Richard, 4 4 3 r o
John P. White's Black Morocco, 5 years old, by John Richards, dam by Sumpter, 6 2 4 r o
Ellis & Deane's ch. filly Sally Gresson, by Eclipse, dam by Arab, 4 years old, 5 3 dis.
James C. Frost's gr. filly Rosanna Elder, by Jerseyman, dam by Royalist, 4 years old, 3 5 dis.
John Hungate's ch. horse Andrew, 5 years old, by Andrew, dam by Eclipse, 2 6 dis.
Time—1:54; 1:52; 1:54; 1:56.

In the last heat, by the rules of the Club, all were ruled off but Geneva and Sally Carr.

SECOND DAY.—Tuesday, October 17th—Produce stake—Sixteen subscribers at $5:
Mr. Tunstall's ch. f. Freshet, by John Fletcher, dam Gomera, 1 1
Mr. Payne's ch. g. by Tuscan, dam Geneva, 2 2
Time not given.

It was a clear "open and shut" affair between the nags from the start. Freshet was not put to her utmost at any time. By the way, we are told that Freshet was foaled by a mare which was caught in a rise on the Arkansas river. The dam in attempting to gain the main land was caught in a thicket of grape vines, where she hung until she expired. In her agonies this colt, Freshet, was foaled, and the colt now bears the marks on her skin of vegetable vipers which contributed to strangle the dam.—St. Louis Republican.

OHIO.—The Cincinnati papers of the 18th instant, received yesterday, add but little to our previously received accounts. The Gazette says:

"The returns by yesterday's mail do not enable us to state the final result. Belmont and Harrison have elected a locofoco Senator; the Washington district is doubtful, and nothing has been heard from the Northwestern district. The locos at Columbus claim, and the whigs concede, that there will be a locofoco joint ballot; but no doubt whether the whig side have any positive data on which to base this opinion. The locofocos here the Senate—the whigs the House. This much is certain, both by what majorities we cannot say."

☞ Frost has appeared at Pensacola.

HEALTH OF THE CITY.—In spite of the uncommonly and unseasonably warm weather, the Fever, both in Hospital and private practice, appears to be steadily abating. The report of interments for the week past shows a sensible decline over that of the preceding. Although we have had no frost in the city, yet it has occurred at several points not far distant; and we think in the course of a few days, we stand a very good chance of being visited by that extinguisher of epidemics. Our city can scarcely yet be termed a safe residence for the uncolonized; but we have every reason to believe that by the time this paper reaches our friends who are sojourning in the North and West, they will be enabled to wend their way homeward, with little or no apprehension of unpleasant consequences.

A FIRE broke out on Thursday morning, about four o'clock, in the upper part of the city, which destroyed several buildings, among them three dwelling-houses, a whig and a locofoco, pitted against each other. It is true that the abolitionists had started candidates in most of the districts, but we presume the locofocs are not particularly anxious to claim them as extra democratic candidates. We can help the locofocos to another and more probable explanation of the causes of their defeat.

The people of Ohio, like their brethren throughout the union, are lovers of good order and invincibly opposed to injustice and oppression. When, in 1841, the whig members of the legislature resigned in a body for the purpose of preventing by this last and desperate resource, a most iniquitous distribution of the congressional districts by the dominant party, large numbers of whigs condemned the act, and at the state elections which followed a few weeks after, recorded their disapprobation of such ultra measures by either refraining from voting, or casting their suffrages against their former friends. Hence it was, that CORWIN, Ohio's famous orator, was defeated, and a majority of locofocos were returned to both branches of the legislature. The moral of this result was, however, lost upon locofocoism. The victorious party beheld in their triumph, not simply a censure of the whigs for resigning in mass, but an unqualified approval of their own attempts to district the state without the slightest concession to their opponents. They considered that they had now a carte blanche to perpetrate any act of injustice which might tend to perpetuate their power, and accordingly they proceeded to pass an apportionment bill by which the rights of the whig party were trampled under foot and locofocoism impregnably entrenched, as they thought in fourteen out of the twenty-one districts of the state. But the people recoiled from this oppression, and the events prove that the despotism of faction will not be tolerated whether it emanate from one or the other of the great political parties of the day. The best evidence of the truth of our remarks is the fact that in the very districts which were most hopelessly gerrymandered, the whig game have been most striking and enormous. Witness the Fairfield and Morgan districts where whigs have been elected in the face of apparently heavy locofoco majorities; while in the northern portion of the state which, being strongly whig, locofocoism could not well gerrymander, the vote was light, the interest manifested comparatively trivial, and consequently, the locofocos have absolutely gained in that section of the state, one or two members of the legislature.

An analogous train of reasoning applies with equal force to the result in Pennsylvania—a state in which the congressional apportionment was a still more iniquitous and inequitable than in Ohio, and in which the whigs have gained largely in the very districts carved out by locofocoism for its special advancement. An examination of last year's vote in Pennsylvania shows that, judged by this standard, the whigs ought to have carried five congressional districts—they have succeeded in more than double the number.

The result in both these states is a wholesome admonition to ultra politicians. It offers them an impressive commentary on the expediency and justice of checking a rapacious propensity to promote their immediate ends at the sacrifice of the rights of those whom circumstances have temporarily thrown into the minority.

A Copenhagen paper states that the home consumption of spirits in Denmark amounts to twenty million quarts, (or about four million gallons,) which, with a population of 750,000 adult males, as according to the last census, would give an average of 6½ quarts per head, or about four times as much as the average consumption in Great Britain and Ireland.—Truly Father Mathew is not abroad there.

☞ The recent overwhelming whig victories in Georgia, Maryland, Ohio, &c., seem to have kindled afresh the fire of PRESTICE's wit, and imparted a keener edge to his sarcasm. See how he wields his trenchant steel over the disfigured scalps of locofocoism:—

☞ The notorious Pettifogger Allen, who misrepresents the State of Ohio in the United States Senate, has frequently denounced the Whig members of that body from Democratic States. What has Pettifogger Allen to say for himself now? Must not Pettifogger flutter considerably?

OHIO.—The Locofocos gerrymandered the Congressional districts in Ohio most infamously. They had "Giraffe," and "Bear," and "Water Horse" districts, which nominals they expected would utterly overwhelm the Whigs. Well, the elections have taken place, and the animals constituting the political menagerie have crouched, cowed, and fled to their dens. Cruel animals! were Locofocoism! Will the Ohio Locos ever undertake to ride the Giraffe over the Whigs again?

☞ The Cincinnati Enquirer has been in the habit of unbelieving the Ohio during the last year or two, and with a very spirited looking cock-chicken, immediately after the elections. We have been looking anxiously for that chicken in the numbers of that paper, but in vain. Where is he, through? Has his comb been cut off? Have his wings been clipped? Have his tail-feathers been plucked out? Send what remains of him to us, and we will do justice in a befitting epitaph to his memory.

☞ We were walking with a gentleman yesterday who took a special delight in telling to all the Locofocos he met with the news from Georgia, Maryland and Ohio. We were infinitely amused with watching the effect upon them. At first they would look incredulous and laugh at the supposed jest; then, as the truth began to assert the truth, a look of mortification and disappointment would go to their inner souls; then, as the truth would go on to steal over their interesting features, and at last their faces would grow pale, their lips tremble, their knees bow, jaws drop open their breasts, and they would walk away, the very pictures of unutterable misery.

☞ Don't we always warn you, Messrs. Locofocos, from whatever the Whig party should once fairly rouse itself to action, such rod as we keep at home would make your forces scatter like a flock of sheep?

☞ We wonder whether the poor Locos think that they can again have defeated in Maryland, Georgia, and Ohio, by an cider barrel and a cross stick?

☞ Oh, Messrs. Locofocos, you fancied recently that the Whig banner was trailing in the dust. Where is it now? Do your eyes ever rest on a red cloud streaming onward far up in the blue sky?

ANECDOTE OF CHEVREUL.—The Revue de Paris relates the following anecdote of Archbishop Cheverus and Chevreul. After the disastrous fire at Salins, which plunged so many families in ruin, the Archbishop commenced a collection for the sufferers, which, although very productive, was still less than he could have desired. When he had exhausted all the ordinary appeals to the benevolence of the people of Bordeaux and its neighborhood, he learned that a grand ball was to take place at Bordeaux, and in the midst of it he presented himself to the astonished dancers. The music immediately ceased, and the dancers stood still. "Come," said the Archbishop, "I am not come here to be a trouble-fête." But the respect of the company for the Archbishop would not allow them to continue. "Well then," said he, "I see that you are waiting for a signal for marching" and making a signal for the orchestra, the music was resumed and the company again took their places. Archbishop Cheverus had his hand to the lady of the house, and as he led her to her place, he commenced collecting subscriptions for the sufferers of Salins. It is needless to say that he had an abundant receipt.
