INDIANS.—The steamboat Rodney, arrived this morning with two schooners in tow, having on board from 300 to 400 of the Florida Indians, on their way to the Far West. They are encamped on the opposite side of the river a short distance from the second municipality steam ferry landing.

The functionary, in company with the captain, repaired to the spot, and on personal investigation found that these boxes were filled with the same destructive material with which the hogsheads had been packed. We trust that the papers generally, and especially New York, will notice this circumstance, and will hold up to public execration the infamous author of this atrocious outbreak.
