

THE BEE.

PUBLISHED AND PUBLISHED DAILY BY JEROME NAYLOR.

SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 23, 1837.

J. B. DAWSON.
CONGRESS—First District.
E. D. WHITE.

candidates for the state legislature.

Z. CARPENTER. A. LUCAS.
W. P. DUNLEAVY. D. AUBREY.
S. ALEXANDER. C. LADOUX.
A. HU. F. LARDET.
J. P. STUART. J. ALLARD.
G. S. DIXON. J. LALANDE.
H. WARDEN. E. CAMPBELL.
J. B. GATES. L. PAULIN.
J. M. KENNEDY.

The City council will keepbugging at the steps of Syria. At its last sitting an ordinance was passed for opening several streets through the old Catholic burying ground. Had any of the members read the following section of the "act to incorporate the city of New Orleans to make a certain donation, and for other purposes," approved March 27, 1828? We recommend his honor the mayor to read it before approoving the ordinance.

Section 2. From and after the first of June next, it shall no longer be permitted to bury the dead in the place of Catholic grave-yard, under the penalty of a fine of five hundred dollars, for each and every contravention, which shall be recovered on information of the attorney general before any court of competent jurisdiction, one-half thereof for the benefit of the informer, and the other half for the benefit of the charity hospital of New Orleans: Provided, that the present grave-yard shall never be destroyed, nor shall at any time sooner be alienated or put to any other use; Provided, moreover, that it shall be lawful for the mayor of the city of New Orleans, whenever he shall think it compatible with the healthiness of the said city, to permit the opening any family tomb, actually situated in the present grave-yard, in order to deposit therein the body of any member of the same family."

Yesterday's northern mail brought New York papers of the evening of the 21st inst. (those were none from Washington,) and Charleston of the 18th. They are entirely barren.

The arrival at this port of the brig Motion, from Havre, was the subject of much conversation yesterday, arising from reports of the extensive奴tality that prevailed on board during the voyage. The Motion left Havre on the 18th of April, with 113 Swiss and other passengers. During the first week of the voyage, 12 of the passengers died; but as soon as the vessel came within the tropics, the mortality ceased, and the health of those who were sick considerably re-established. If, as it is supposed, the disease which prevailed on board this vessel, were the cholera, it would seem that it is disengaged of its terrors, when it comes within the tropics.

We cannot avoid the conclusion that much more importance is attached to the failure of Lord Grey's amendment to the reform bill, in the British house of lords, than the occupancy intrinsically demands. The blustering of the bill, before the committee, is by no means changed by this vote, and perhaps the loss of time, occasioned by the adjournment of the subject until the 10th of May, is the only real disadvantage resulting from this incidental defeat, that ought to be deplored. It is true indeed, that the weakness of the minister has been somewhat presumptively discovered; but this discovery will force them to resort to the strength which is within their reach; and a timely reinforcement of liberal peers, will still enable the minister to carry out the plan which he proposed, of considering the clauses of the bill. Lord Grey has evidently placed too much reliance on his declaration, in its second reading, "that he would not hesitate in the creation of new peers, should such a measure become necessary." It has now become so evident, however, that he only refers to his pledge, and all is well again. The people of England will probably be again disturbed by the untoward blunder of the premier; and its effects cannot but be again detrimental to commerce.

The intelligence from Portugal warrants the conclusion, that by this time, the armament of Don Pedro has made its descent upon the coast of Portugal; what his reception may be, is very uncertain. The discontent that prevails in that country, the King of Portugal, &c., that they are to be ruled by the British Empire, 840 vessels, the tonnage of which amounted to 97,249 tons. In 1823, there were built 1,003 vessels, tonnage 107,776 tons. The number in the intermediate years was as follows: in 1821, when they amounted to 17,192, tonnage 207,089 tons; and the smallest was in 1822, when they amounted to 7,000, tonnage 87,144. In the year 1814, the number of vessels belonging to the several ports of the empire was 24,415, amounting to 2,815,965 tons, and navigated by 178,060 men; in 1821 the number had decreased to 24,242, amounting to 2,861,964 tons, and navigated by 188,422 men.

In the coasting trade, in 1824, the inward money was $2,222,190 tons, the outward $2,019,180; the former was $2,270,308, the latter $1,962,851. This does not include the coasting trade of Ireland.

"Patriot."

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. Hunt replied with a masterly and splendid effort—clearly removing every difficulty and doubt that Mr. Garrison's apprehensions had suggested.

There was one passage in the speech of Col. Hunt, which must long sink deep into the heart of every one within the sound of his voice. —It was this: "Aye, sir, we will send men to the convention will calculate the value of the Union. In place of employing foreigners to calculate for us, let us employ men whose veins are filled with American blood; and, trust me, they will find it above all price!"

Viewed, we fervently hope it will be, by those States, which like us, are deeply interested in the question, which gave rise to the meeting on Tuesday night, the government is probably the most important of any that the party have hitherto adopted.

Col. H