Agency of Sun Mutual Insurance Co.
THE undersigned, appointed by the above Company their agent for the city of New-Orleans, is now prepared to receive applications for insurance on Buildings, Merchandise, Furniture, &c., and to issue policies at reduced rates, which they will cause to be promptly paid on the presentation of the same.
These Insurances, being effected in the city of New York, with very little delay, will be found more convenient to the insured than those effected in this city, as the latter are frequently delayed for weeks from the want of the usual number of Directors to meet and act upon the applications.
The Directors are interested in the profits and responsible for the losses of the Company, and consequently their interest and duty are identified with the insured.

Candidate for Mayor.

☞ We are authorized to announce the Hon. A. D. CROSSMAN as a candidate for re-election to the office of MAYOR of the City of New Orleans.

The New-Orleans Daily Bee.

Thursday Morning, Nov. 18, 1847.

General Taylor.

We are gratified to perceive the Municipal authorities engaged in making preparations for the appropriate reception of the laurelled veteran at Buena Vista. They will find the people of New Orleans eager and enthusiastic in every demonstration intended to do honor to the Hero, and to mark the gratitude which Louisiana, in common with the whole country, cherishes for his splendid military services, and signalizes the affection which she feels for the glorious old soldier who has made his home upon her soil. When ZACHARY TAYLOR reaches New Orleans he will witness a civic ovation that was equal, if it not beggar, his military triumphs. He will witness the outpouring of popular respect and admiration, the ardent, gushing and unalterable devotion of the denizens of the Crescent City towards one who unsurpassed in the splendid speciosities of a warrior, exhibits and enhances the brilliancy of his military renown, by the unaffected modesty, simplicity and sincerity of his private character.

The excitement occasioned in the public mind by the certain intelligence that General TAYLOR will shortly be among us, is the first commentary upon the insinuations of those who had thought because they hoped—that his popularity had proved evanescent and was already on the wane. The flame acquired by such Heroism and Beauty, is of an imperishable nature. Its ashes cannot be dismantled by years. Other cements would fail to extinguish it. And this is so, because his glory is not based upon an accidental mutiny trophy, nor does it partake of the mere attributes of the Hero. His exploits have shown him to be the most eminent observer of military science, and the most consummate warrior in the field, as well as the most cool and sagacious counsellor in the Cabinet. As a great General, as a wise, temperate, and humane Governor, he has undoubtedly impressed his character, and his name, upon the age in which he has fought—but his Buena Vista—surpasses his every achievement, as a soldier, and his every act as a statesman, in the splendor of its triumph, and in the overwhelming grandeur of the consequences which it has developed.

Such a triumph, coming after winning the field at Buena Vista. He may even fight no more in the battle field, and his sword may remain sheathed and his token political instruments of warfare, and for a while decorate the country of his invaluable services for, but for the hope of years, nor the chance opportunities of future pursuits can affect from the mind of the nation the grateful recollection of his services, or induce them to swerve from the settled resolve to bestow upon their brave country gentleman worthy token of him and them.

Massachusetts Wakes as Usual.

Despite of those extraordinary feats of enterprise, the most prominent of the Telegraph and Commercial Express of the New York papers of the 9th inst. is the nearly complete returns of the election for Governor in the State of Massachusetts, and the result is as follows: The total vote for Briggs is 59,019, Cushing, 36,[illegible]—Briggs's majority, 2,[illegible]. The whole number of votes cast is 97,[illegible]—Briggs's majority over all, 2,[illegible]. The towns yet to hear from are 267—The towns yet to hear from in 1846 gave a democratic majority of 1,[illegible]. This is great. Cushing is in a minority in the State of more than 25,000—The Whigs will have a majority of about one Hundred in the House, and the Senate will be all Whig. The Council will not be translated from Democracy to Abolitionism this year.

Trial of Lt. Col. Fremont.

The most important question that has been propounded to Gen. Kearny, whether in the course of his Californian campaign he had not seen several Californians taken prisoners, without making provision for them. Objection was made to the question, but it was overruled by Col Fremont and Gen. Kearny. We copy from the Baltimore Clipper the following report of the proceedings:

Gen. Kearny was then asked whether in the course of his campaign in California
