THE CITY REMAINS.

We have a great many complaints about the administration of the city. It seems to be the opinion of many of our citizens that the management of the city is being conducted in a most unbusinesslike manner. The city is a vast domain, and it is impossible for one man to manage it. There are many departments, and each of them should be managed by a competent person. The present administration is a failure, and it is time for a change to be made. The city is in a state of confusion, and it is necessary for the government to take prompt action to restore order and efficiency.

THE SWAMP AND THE FISH.

The swamp and the fish are two things that are often mentioned together. The swamp is a place of death and decay, and the fish is a creature that lives in the water.
