PANORAMA EXHIBITION.
THE great Panoramic picture of the Kingdom of France, the Capital of the Kingdom of France is now exhibiting in the building on the public square of Rampart street.

The view is taken from the roof of the south end of the Tuileries; the spectator must therefore imagine himself placed on this elevated situation which commands an extensive prospect over the whole city. Immediately under the eye of the spectator in a northern direction, is the roof of the King's apartments, and on the right that of the long picture gallery stretching eastward as far as the Louvre. This gallery bounds the place de Carrousel on the south side and the new gallery on the north, in the centre of this square is seen the triumphal arch. On this square Napoleon was wont to review his battalions previous to their departure for their respective destinations, and here off the walls resounded with the clang of martial music. On the west side of the palace, the spectator looks down on the Garden of the Tuileries, and beyond that into the distance is seen the palace of the Garden of Meubles, and the woods of the Champ de Mars in the distance.

When we consider that Paris has been the theatre of so many great political events, which have astonished Europe, we can easily understand that it is a subject of some interest for a picture to be seen in the public.
