surveyor and inspector of the Port of Madisonville (Louis.) Daniel G. Croc-call as consul at Marsailles.

New York, March 23. YASAY LATA FROM BOGOTA.

By the brig Arbolean, Captain Chapman, we have received Bogota papers and letters to Feb. 14th inclusive. We have also been permitted to copy from a State to the Consular General in this city, the following Bases of a Constitution, which have been approved by the Congress.

1. The integrity of the Republic of Colombia is confirmed, as established by the fundamental law [of 1819.]

2. Its government shall be central, popular, representative, and elective.

3. The supreme power, in its exercise, shall always be divided into legislative, executive and judicial.

4. The legislative power shall be vested in a Congress, composed of a Senate and House of Representatives, whose acts shall receive the sanction of the Executive.

5. The legislative power shall never be delegated to any person or corporation.

6. The executive power shall reside in the President of the Republic, and will necessarily be exercised through the agency of Ministers, secretary of state.

7. A Council of state will aid the President in the more important business of his administration.

8. Justice will be administered by Courts and Judges, with entire independence in their exercise.

9. For the better government of the Republic, the territory will be divided into Departments, Provinces, Cantons, and Parishes.

10. Chambers of Districts will be established, with power to deliberate and decide on all municipal and local affairs of the Departments, and to represent [to the government] whatever may concern the general interests of the Republic.

Sec. 1. Each Department whose population, wealth, and other circumstances, are sufficient to sustain such an establishment separately, with advantage to the public, will have a District Chamber.

Sec. 2. Each Department which on account of the smallness of its population or other causes, cannot sustain such an establishment with public advantage, will be connected for this purpose with an adjoining Department.

11. The periods of election will be prolonged, to avoid the inconveniences which result from frequent changes in the high functionaries, or even the repeated election of the same functionaries.

12. No power or magistrate shall have unlimited authority, or any other authority than is given by the Constitution.

13. No power or magistrate shall have authority to suspend individual security, except in cases specified by the Constitution.

14. Every public functionary is subject to responsibility. The President is irresponsible, except in the cases of high treason specified in the Constitution.

15. The Catholic, Apostolic, Roman religion, is the religion of the State. The government exercising the office of protectorate of the Colombian Church no other public worship will be permitted.

16. The Constitution guarantees personal security, the right of property, equality before the law, the liberty of the press, liberty of employment, and the right of petition.

The Editor of the Louisiana Advertiser has come out in the first article under the name of his paper, with an unnamely attack on the person who collects Marine Intelligence for his, and other papers of this city, accusing him, with repeated imputations of good faith.
