Proclamation had beet issued, or dering the authorities to maintain the exercise the Emperor published an amnesty for all political offences. Poreigness who had been guilty of such offences were to be expelled the territories. The Wetter Zeitung, of the 25th March, acknowledges an address of the English residents of Vienna to the people of Ausnis, and says that this address has made a deep impression upon the inhabitants of the capital, and that it has tended to strengthen the sympathies which the Austrians have ever felt for the generous British untion. The first-horn of freedom among the great European nations."

In Hunghry the concessions made by the Emperor were just in time to prevent the Proelamation of a republic. While the magnates resonanced their privileges in the Assembly of Presburg, on the 18th, a more formulable two-lution was going on in Pesth, where 100,000 of the new National Guards assembled and encerted the establishment of a republic, which they did not, however, proclaim. Things looked very serious till the news of the Constitution alsonations on the Emperor arrived at Peath, where the information was enthusiastically received.
