NEW ORLEANS: TUESDAY, MAY 5, 1829.

(From the National Intelligencer.)

The Madness of a Party.—A bill has passed both branches of the Legislature of the State of Pennsylvania, to appoint a new Board of canal commissioners...

JERUSALEM.—The present dwelling-house of Jerusalem are clumsy, square, low masses, without either chimneys or windows...

The Gazette de France says that the following anecdote is well authenticated...

FISCAL ANECDOTE.—A certain degree of jealousy is to be found in every country...

History, especially the disposition of a most honorable master. The companion of his old master, Betsuget had always lived with him on the best terms...

Armed with the receipt in the name of M. Brisquet, the officer lost no time in paying him a visit. But a kennel composed all his possessions, and a few bites were all that the officer could carry away. The execution of the ordinance became difficult, and as expedition was necessary...

In his extreme perplexity, the unfortunate man resolved to take Brisquet in his arms...

He knew nothing, but his quality of inheritance. Look at his condition. You can cure him, and he will recover his strength.

The duties of the Treasury must be collected. He must therefore pay. His dog has no money.

He must therefore pay. You must therefore pay. You must therefore pay. You must therefore pay.

But he Treasury should be entitled to the tax which on demand will take more than a year's revenue from Brisquet.

The guardian was vehement, the minister more so. The conference was long, but his excellency would absolutely abide nothing of his demand.

Very well, Monsieur, said he, since your excellency exacts rigorously on the subsistence of a poor animal, since you force upon me the alternative of shortening my own necessities...

It is difficult to find an English word to express the French "fiscalité."
