The New-Orleans Daily Bee.

TUESDAY MORNING, Feb. 29, 1848.

☞ In consequence of a derangement of our printing press, the subscribers to the Bee received their paper yesterday at a later hour than usual. We hope to remedy this inconvenience in a day or two, and, in the meanwhile, ask the indulgence of our readers.

THE NORTHERN MAIL failed yesterday from beyond Mobile.

☞ We understood, at a late hour last night, that the Democratic or Locofoco Convention nominated Dr. ISIDORE LABATUT, as their candidate for Mayor, but he declined—and the Convention thereupon nominated M. M. REYNOLDS, Esq.

General Taylor and a Whig National Convention.

Two or three weeks ago we undertook, seriously to believe, among the Whig presses of the State, to convince our political brethren of the absolute necessity of being represented at the Whig National Convention which is to assemble at Philadelphia, on the 7th of June next. We endeavored to demonstrate that as friends of General TAYLOR, anxious for his success, and resolved to secure it by all honorable means, it was the bounden duty of the Whig party to do their utmost to obtain for General TAYLOR the nomination of the National Convention, and thus to ensure harmonious and united party action in his behalf. Unfortunately, however, the public mind appeared destitute of expedients and arguments. The Whigs of Louisiana seemed to think that their fervid attachment to General TAYLOR was quite enough to render his triumph certain; that as they refused to go into Convention, every other State would do the same; and that the people at large, by some strange and hitherto unheard of transformation, would necessarily choose themselves out of all their political leaders, twenty years ago divided them into two great parties, and meet on the level with undivided support of ZACHARY TAYLOR.
