

expected would have been Streaming: But in less than an Hour, the Clouds (which had been pretty still) began to move to the S. W. and at last obscured the whole Hemisphere; which before was all clear enough (except towards the North) to shew the Stars, although bespread with Vapours, like a thin Fog, a little inclining to red.

This Relation I thought it convenient to give you, and the Illustrious Society, because it may assist such as are wiser than my self to discover the Nature of this difficult Phænomenon.

Your much obliged

Humble Servant,

W. DERHAM.

II. A remarkable Conformation of the Urinary Parts, communicated in a Letter to the Same, by Mr. John Budgen.

I Am advised to communicate to you a very uncommon Case, which I met with in my Country Practice, and is as follows.

In Villâ Com' Surriæ, Ockley vulgò dictâ, anno 1711 nata est Infantula, cujus in Tergo, circa vertebra inferiores, apparuit Tumor indolens, cutis colorem, rem, Oviq; columbini majusculi magnitudinem referens, qui cum Puellâ tantoperè concrevit, ut circiter nonum, vel decimum ætatis annum, ubi primùm conſpexi, Veficam vitulinam, aëre diftentam, fed fine Cervice, planè repræſentaverit. Anno præſenti (viſ. 1728.) Veficæ bubulinæ magnitudinem æquabat. Die 29 Jan. proxime elapſo in Lecto jacenti diſruptus eſt hic Tumor, a quo multum Liquoris, inſtar Urinæ profuebat. Re perſpectâ, invenimus Tunicas (& interiùs Materiam mucoſam) Ureteres, Venas, & Arterias, tales omninò, quales Vefica habere conſuevit: nec defuit commercium quoddam cum Partibus internis per foramen in vertebriſ Digitum hominis minorem in Abdomen admittens, quod Vaſa memorata recipiebat. 2<sup>o</sup> Die Feb. 1728, horam circiter decimam nocturnam obiit Puella; & ſi Cadaver aperire per Parentes, huic Rei ſtrenuè reclamantes, licuiſſet, credor quidè in Abdomine, Veficæ Cervicem, & nullam aliam Veficam inveniremus; non enim poſt ruptum Tumorem vel ſemèl minxerat.

I hope you'll be pleaſed to take this in good Part,
from,

Darling, Ap. 18, in Surry, 1729.

S I R, your very humble Servant,

JOHN BUDGEN.
