

TEST OF HYPNOTISM.

Central Patient Suffering from Complications Quieted After Morphine Had Failed.

A remarkably successful test of the value of hypnotism as a medicinal agent was made in Bellevue hospital New York city the other morning.

Willie McCabe, four years old, of 522 East Seventy-sixth street, since New Year's day has been saving his pennies to buy a bicycle.

At the breakfast table Willie talked in a rambling way, fell on the floor, and had several terrible convulsions.

"Willie! Willie!" shouted Dr. Carey, "now watch my fingers," said Dr. Carey, holding the index finger of each hand close to the boy's face and quietly urging him all the time to keep his eyes fastened upon them.

"Now, Willie," said the doctor, "all your pain is gone and you will be able in a moment to ride your bicycle."

The effect of the suggestion was marvelous. The tense muscles relaxed. The boy straightened his body to a normal position and a smile took the place of his expression of torture.

"Now, Willie," said Dr. Carey, firmly, "it is time to go to sleep."

The eyes droopily closed and in less than ten minutes from the beginning of the experiment every symptom of pain had vanished and the boy fell into a deep slumber.

"The boy should be able to leave the hospital soon," said Dr. Barbour. "This is a remarkably quick cure for this malady. It lasts ordinarily for weeks."

The much-perplexing question of finding a successor to the late Anton Seidl to conduct the Wagner opera in this country during the coming opera season has finally been decided.

For it. It will testify in the highest possible way to England's regard for an Anglo-Saxon alliance and will be the most compliment the British nation could pay an American.

This fact is taken into consideration by the queen and cabinet. The courts of Calcutta and Simla are more magnificent than the St. James or any other palace in Europe.

During a trip abroad Mr. Gould and his wife purchased some hand-painted miniatures set in frames of gold, silver and jewels, together with some antiquated jewelry.

Millionaire George J. Gould has just been defeated in a contest of long standing, which he has been having with the customs authorities over the duty levied on some valuable curios which he had imported on La Touraine.

Mr. Gould appealed, claiming that they were admissible as "paintings," but the board of general appraisers has decided against him, overruling the appeal, and Mr. Gould must pay the duty.

GIVES WARNING.

Big Steel Girders on Brooklyn Bridge Snap Under Tremendous Weight During Blockade.

A piece of twisted iron about 250 feet east of the New York tower of the Brooklyn bridge has caused the greatest anxiety on the part of hundreds of thousands of people who cross that structure daily.

When the Brooklyn bridge was planned every allowance was made for the expansion of the steel girders during the hot months.

Now the bridge traffic is all one sided. It in the morning is heavy laden trolley cars come over to New York, returning almost empty to Brooklyn.

On Friday evening a horse dropped dead on the southern roadway. There was an immediate block of the heavily laden trolley cars and the line soon stretched from the Brooklyn tower over to New York city.

Two of the "fore and aft" girders, running lengthwise with the bridge, had met and twisted inward.
