The Story of Tracy Beaker was a television programme adapted from the book of the same name by Jacqueline Wilson. It ran on CBBC for five series, from 2002 to 2006 and also contained a feature length episode, Tracy Beaker's Movie of Me, broadcast in 2004, as well as a week of interactive episodes for Children in Need, entitled Tracy Beaker Parties with Pudsey, which were also crossovers with other shows from CBBC. The episodes themselves intersperse live action with cartoon sequences drawn by Nick Sharratt depicting Tracy's inner thoughts and, from series 3 onwards, the thoughts of other characters. Initially these cartoons would often be followed by a more realistic interpretation of what happened, but this was discontinued after the first series. The theme song was written and performed by Keisha White. In March 2009, the BBC announced that actress Dani Harmer would reprise the role of Tracy Beaker in a new series consisting of 13 episodes in which she would become a careworker at her former care home - this appears on TV as Tracy Beaker Returns. All of the five series have been released on DVD.

It ran on [[CBBC]] for five series, from 2002 to 2006 and also contained a feature length episode, "[[Tracy Beaker's Movie of Me]]", broadcast in 2004, as well as a week of interactive episodes for [[Children in Need]], entitled "Tracy Beaker Parties with Pudsey", which were also [[Fictional crossover|crossovers]] with other shows from CBBC. The episodes themselves intersperse live action with cartoon sequences drawn by [[Nick Sharratt]] depicting Tracy's inner thoughts and, from series 3 onwards, the thoughts of other characters. Initially these cartoons would often be followed by a more realistic interpretation of what happened, but this was discontinued after the first series. The theme song was written and performed by [[Keisha White]]. In March 2009, the BBC announced that actress [[Dani Harmer]] would reprise the role of [[Tracy Beaker]] in a new series consisting of 13 episodes in which she would become a careworker at her former care home - this appears on TV as "[[Tracy Beaker Returns]]". All of the five series have been released on DVD. It has been running for over five years, with a newer series, Tracy Beaker Returns (featuring and older Tracy who now works at the care home), following on.

'''Selz Abbey''' or '''Seltz Abbey''' {{{lang-de|Kloster Selz}}; {{lang-fr|Abbaye de Seltz}}} is a former monastery and [[Imperial abbey]] in [[Seltz]], formerly '''Selz''',<ref>"Selz" is the German spelling, "Seltz" the French</ref> in [[Alsace]], [[France]].

==History==
The [[OrdRule of St. Benedict|Benedictine]] monastery, ... Roman Emperor|Otto I]] and dowager empress, later Saint Adelheid, who was buried there on 16 December 999.<ref>see [[Odilo of Cluny]]'s "Epitaph of Adelheid", chapter 20, in Sean Gilsdorf, "Queenship and Sanctity: The" Lives "of Mathilda and the" Epitaph "of Adelheid" (Catholic University of America Press, 2004)</ref>. In January 992 it was granted royal "tuitio" and immunity (the equivalent of the later "[[Reichsunmittelbarkeit]]") by [[Otto III, Holy Roman Emperor|Otto III]].<ref>"[[Monumenta Germaniae Historica]]" DD Otto III, no. 79.</ref>

The abbey suffered from severe floods in 1307. A new abbey, and was rebuilt between 1307 and 1315. The relics of Saint Adelheid, which apparently survived the floods, were moved to the church of Saint Stephen in Seltz. A daughter house of the abbey was founded at Mirmelberg<ref> in 1197, wand itself washed away by floods in 1469</ref>.^.

The abbey was eventually secularized in 1481 and the monks formed a college of [[Canon (priest)|canons]] operating as the [[chapter (religion)|chapter]] of Saintthe nearby St. Stephen's church (a mile away from the abbey), retaining some of the privileges of the former foundation, although not all the possessions.

The chapter became [[Protestant]] in 1575 and was [[mediatisation|mediatised]] by the [[Electoral Palatinate]].<ref>[http://www.heraldica.org/topics/royalty/reichsstande.htm#mozTocId286232 Übersicht über die Reichsstände<!-- Bot generated title -->]</ref>. Buildings Most of the abbey became amonastic buildings were quarry atied from the beginning of the 17th century. The remaining building of the abbey became, except for one which had been used as a reformed academy for young nobles in 1575. The academy but was closed in 1577 because the new eElector was [[Lutheran]].

The Protestant chapter reverted to a canonry in 1684 after Seltz was annexated by France (in 1680) and the local population was re-converted to [[Roman Catholicism]]. It was dissolved by the [[bishop of Strasbourg]] (with the approved byal of the king of France) in 1692.

The Seltz parish of Seltz was dissolved during the rule of the [[National Convention]] (1792–95) and the Saintchurch of St. Stephen church was burnedset on fire by [[Austria]]n troops after the b[[Battle of Seltz]] on 23 October 1793. But the Saint StephenThe church survived however and the parish reborn during the was re-created in 1801 in the time of the [[French Consulate in 1801]]. The church was extensively rebuilt byunder the rule of the [[German Empire]] (which had annexated Alsace in 1870) for the occasion of the anniversary of the death of the Empress Adelaide in 1899.

The church was almost destroyed during [[World War II]]; r. Restoration was completed in 1958.
