A NEW STEAMBOAT COMPANY.
Saturday evening we had an opportunity of examining the plans and specifications of a new steamboat gotten up by Capt. De Haven, a man too well known upon our Western and Southern rivers to need any recommendations from us. In this boat we have the adult, scientific ability, labor and study of many years, and no one can see after a very few moments examination that nothing is equal it her ever been upon our waters, and that it combines all the advantages for a superior steamer, one that will excel all its use at the present time. We have had occasion to speak of Capt. De Haven before in connection with the new lightering company and other scientific pursuits, and have already paid tribute to his superior attainments and his extraordinary, splendid genius, and now can see after a very few moments examination that nothing is equal it has
