The CIC was a group of Islamic law courts who united to rival the administration of the Transitional Federal Government (TFG) of Somalia. The CIC has aligned itself with al-Qaida and other jihadist groups.

<sup>3</sup> Analyst Note: AIAI is an NIPF CT Priority 2A target. Priority 2A targets are defined to include: terrorist/extremist groups that have demonstrated both the intention and the capability to attack US persons and interests, but are believed to pose somewhat less of a threat to US interests around the world than Priority 1B groups; or terrorist/extremist that have demonstrated intention to attack US persons and interests and are taking action to develop or acquire WMD capability.

In 1998 detainee attempted to travel to Yemen, but was detained by Yemeni authorities and deported back to Somalia (NFI).<sup>7</sup> In 1999, detainee worked for six months painting and repairing ships, and then returned to Kismayoo, SO, and worked on a ferry that transported sugar to Mdoa, Maize, and Raas Kaambooni, SO. In 2000, detainee met Hassan, a previous acquaintance from the training camp in Raas Kaambooni. Hassan assisted in finding detainee a job with Issa Elias, a Tanzanian who owned a diving equipment business. Detainee went to Mogadishu in 2001 and was employed in a clothing shop working for a woman he met in Yemen. Detainee married this woman in 2001. Detainee claimed that he and his wife have since expanded the business and his wife is currently managing the clothing shop in Mogadishu.

The Sakina Mosque provided financial assistance to families of terror suspects in custody by covering their legal expenses.)

A reply was sent to the EAAQ members, in which UBL said that he would send a new leader.<sup>27</sup>)
- (S//NF) Detainee acknowledged conducting operational planning and execution of terrorist activities.
  - (S//NF) Detainee admitted personal involvement in the 28 November 2002 terrorist attack against the Kikambala Paradise Hotel. Detainee admitted that he participated in the planning and execution of the attack.<sup>28</sup>

  - (S//NF) Detainee stated he was in charge of videotaping the attack.<sup>33</sup>
  - (S//NF) After the 2002 attacks, detainee and Nabhan fled from Kenya to Somalia. Nabhan is believed to have spent time in Mogadishu and Raas Kaambooni. While in Mogadishu, Nabhan was sponsored by AIAI's former militia leader Hassan Dahir Aweys.<sup>34</sup> (Analyst Note: Detainee's association with Aweys during this period is unknown.)
- (S//NF) Omar Said Omar stated he maintained e-mail contact with detainee regarding the casing of other potential targets in 2003, including Western embassies and airliners. - (S//NF) Salim stated that detainee attended a six-week advanced training course on forging documents, manufacturing passports, and conducting surveillance using covert photography taught by Harun Fazul. The course included training videos on these subjects.<sup>39</sup> Attendees at Harun Fazul's training included eight foreigners from various countries that were to return to their home country after the training as sleeper operatives to await further orders.<sup>40</sup>

- (S//NF) Detainee cached weapons in his home, which also served as an EAAQ safe house.
  - (S//NF) During NSIS custodial interviews, Salim Awadh Salim provided information on the weapons stored at detainee's home. Fazul instructed detainee, Salim, and Nabhan to retrieve weapons from a CIC compound near the international airport in Somalia, which they then transported to detainee's home in Somalia. Fazul's intent was to build up a store of weapons and then slowly transport them to Kenya for use in future operations there.<sup>45</sup>
    - (S//NF) Salim stated that SA-7 surface to air missiles (SAM) were among the weapons stored at detainee's house.<sup>46</sup>
  - (S//NF) Salim reported detainee's residence was a safe house used for meetings among members of the EAAQ in Somalia.<sup>47</sup>
