Names — A good man, in a good thing. Talking of giving children ill sounding of ill suggesting names. Christ Lanh said—"Don't Nuo demo Call so into nothing. And Lamb was riched and the call so by "Lazarus" and he will go into the dose" as sure as the dogs went to his prototype in the Bible. Call him "Jehosaphat," and he may possibly be a hostler, but never a gentlemen. Call him Judas, if you dare, and he will go out and hang himself, some day, like his aucieut namesake. But don't err on the other hand, by naming him after nots hillities. It dwarfs a man horribly to be called "George Washington", or "Mapoleon Bunaparte"—it does, indeed—and he must be an uncommonly amart fellow to survive it. Keep clear of extremes, is the safe rule here, as every where else. A name should not him to much more to little—a dogues delively when about starting his day about the best title—"What say you," said Bentley, "to calling it the 'Magasine of Wit!" "That promises too moth," asid his friend. "Well, then," said the publisher, 'how will it do to call it 'Bentley's Magasine T'" "Ah," replied the wit, "that promises too little—Boston Pot."

"Farewith the plumed troop and the Lig wars Which make smittine writter." But two short years ago, the whole of the Palmetto State, from the swamps of the seaboard to the mountains—though not so much in the mountains as among the swamps—was to a blaze of war. Scenession conventions, the organization and drilling of troops, unitary each campionits, armories, and appropriations during the state of the state City Intelligence.
