OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

The Lenslative Assessaly of France is a disgrace to the French nation, and a reproach to the Republican name. For words spoken MR. CLAY'S SPEECH. We no ich regret that our contracted limits revent us from giving Mr. Clay's great speech a debate, one duel has recently been fought and the scenes of every hour in the day are calculated to provoke a dozen duels. Groans, normals, and interruptions of every kind chahe Washington papers, and will, we presume he Washington papers, and with, we presume, be published in paraphlet and widely circulated. We extract the following closing passages of acterize the proceedings. The Right and Mr. President, I wish I had the physic hasten to waids a conclusion.

The responsibility of this great measure passes from the hauds of the committee, and from my hauds. They know, and I know, that it is an awful and tremendous responsibility. I hope that you will meet it with a just conception, and a true appreciation of its magnitude, and the magnitude of consequences which may ensue from your decision one way or the other. The alternatives, I fare, which the measure presents, are concord and increased discord; a servile evil war—originating in its causes on the lower Rio Grande, and terminating, joss by, in its consequences with the upper Rio Grande, in the Sauta Fe country—or the restoration of harmony and fraternal kindness. rhiente in the Chamber. The Minister of Justice, turning towards the last, spake with great energy, but his voice was overpowered by the tunnist.
The President—I can do no more than the restoration of harmony and fraternal kind ness.

I believe, from the bottom of my soul, that the measure is the re union of this Union. I believe it is the dove of peace, which, taking its aerial flight from the dome of the Capitol, carries the glad tidings of assured peace and resourced harmony to all the removest extremities of this distracted land. I believe that it will be strended with all these bonsfierent effects—And now let us discard all resonant desires, all love of place, all longing after the glided crumbs which fail from the table of power.—Let us forget popular fears, from whatever quarter they may epring. Let us go to the limpid fountain of unadulterated patriotism, and, performing a solemn lustration, return divested of all self-th, sinister and sorded impurities, and think alone of our God, our country, our consciences and our glorious Union—that Union without which we shall be torn into hostile fragulation, and sooner or later become: the victims of military de-potism or foreign domination.

Mr. President, what is an individual man 1 on this system of violence. [Loud interruption.]
