THE DAILY DEE.
C. P. WEBBER & CO.
$10.
MONDAY MORNING, MARCH 17, 1862.
SUBSCRIPTIONS BY THE WEEK
The columns of the Dee are authorized to receive subscriptions to any paper in the city at 25 cents per week, payable to all agents in the city.

WHERE WE MAY EXPECT.

It seems to be admitted by the patriotism and correspondents here of Illinois which should distinguish Southern men were insufficient to prompt them to the full performance of their duty, they might easily discover powers near to nation in those motives of self-preservation which so frequently govern the conduct of nations and individuals. If either stimulus would suffice, we might confidently appeal to them. It is fairly presumed that every Southern citizen is desirous of promoting his present, and future well being, and attaching his property. All of them will be at once subject to the rule of force or destruction if the Federal forces succeed in their designs upon the South. Of this alternative the people of the invaded States cannot be in doubt. However much they may be grossly misled by designing politicians, however much they may be misled by the passions of the hour, they must see that the subjugation of the invaders involves certain poverty, misery, despair and ruin. Nothing can be more certain than this. Nothing can be more plain to the humblest comprehension. If either stimulus would suffice, we might confidently appeal to them. It is fairly presumed that every Southern citizen is desirous of promoting his present, and future well being, and attaching his property. All of them will be at once subject to the rule of force or destruction if the Federal forces succeed in their designs upon the South. Of this alternative the people of the invaded States cannot be in doubt. However much they may be grossly misled by designing politicians, however much they may be misled by the passions of the hour, they must see that the subjugation of the invaders involves certain poverty, misery, despair and ruin. Nothing can be more certain than this. Nothing can be more plain to the humblest comprehension. Every man who is not a fool