NEW ORLEANS: MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1830.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 23.

We have read with astonishment the subjoined report. Had it proceeded from the countenners of all religions, those who would roll upon us the night of infidelity which once spread terror and desolation over France...

It will be admitted on all hands, that so grave a charge ought not to be made without substantial evidence. And yet the evidence adduced, is absolutely nothing. It is given in the face of the public declarations of the accused...

We would now ask this Committee, with all the respect we entertain for them as men and as citizens, whether the principle that all is false in politics, ought to be applied to a case like this? Is it right to inflame the more ignorant class of citizens, by arraying before them imaginary fears?

The Committee speak of the "unanimous adoption" of Col. Johnson's report by the Senate. If this were true, it would not prove the impropriety of renewing the petition;—but as to the matter of fact, we quote the following from the Burlington Free Press...

of the report. The committee of the House reported afterwards, more favorably to the petitioners. This report, having been read, was also accepted, and ordered to be printed. So far, no vote had been taken, expressing the views of either house of Congress on the main subject.

The weather continues warm and pleasant; the Mississippi remains at the same height, noticed in our last, within the last six miles of high water mark. The river in general is so it was when noticed in our last, and we have not heard of any thing new in relation to commerce...
