Caracas, Jan. 27th, 1848.

I herewith send you a hasty sketch of the present state of this city.

About one year ago. Gen. Monargas was placed in the Presidential chair by the party called Oligarquis; the choice was a forlorn hope at the time, as he was the only person to oppose the candidate of the liberal party. On the serival of the President elect at La Guaira, Gen. Paez met him on terms of themdable, (although many years of disquate had existed between them) and after a cordial erbarace they came up to Caracas.—Paez used his influence and advice, to form the cabinet, with some of our hest citizens. The Government started quietly, and confidence and hope animated the public. A few short weeks put an end to our expectations; several of the cabinet retired in disguat, and the President kept the breach wilching, by the spioniment of a number of offenders against the former government. Many influential men, and among them Gen. Flores, endeavored to healthe breach. Meetings were theid; remoistrances and threats from the present poured forth in volumes; finally, it was determined to impeach the President before the Congress about to meet.

In the meantime the President desarmed the milities actives, and placed arms in the hands of the milities reaers, known to be most faverable to the liberal party; all the old liberals were invited to return, and many were placed in office, some not being entitled to citizenship. Commerce became crippled, and confidence destroyed: the government hobbled on with an empty treasury; large bodies of troops were preparing, near Caracas; and, on the 24th of this month, when there were senterly members enough to form a quorum in the House of Representatives, there were 4,000 troops in and near the city.—On the opening of Congress, serious disorder commenced between several members, high words drew a great crowd, diager
