NEW ORLEANS,

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 7, 1831. We have but a few words to say to the English Wednesday last. Upon what grounds the genthemen has proceeded in this discovery, we are at a loss to conceive. He must have seen that us by his own measure. We explain. In mencluded an especial ode of his recited on the boards of the American Theatre. Without the fear of inodesty before his eyes, he took occasion to speak of it in no derogatory terms. Now it would be the height of vanity in us, not to ay of impudence, to have spoken tho' in a semi-laudatory manner, of a piece, which the Editor of the Courier so kindly attributes to our pen .have any intention of imitating him? If so, the gentleman entertains a higher sense of our humility, than we would be willing to justify.

We have no idesire to allude to past evens ; but would wish to be informed if the english editor of the Courier's critical remarks and poeticul offusions are justly entitled to the same credene as certain individual correspondencies published not over two or three years ago? Who can write letters for political purposes?

We publish the address of the provisional government to the Polish nation. It is impossible to read the harrowing lines without a mingled feeling of compassion and indignation. A mation contemplating the abandonment of their na tive land, rather than yield to tyranny, is a pictire at once sublime and desolating. It bespeaks the energy of despair,—the indomitable spirit of freedom that may be broken but not bent. ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF PO-

LAND. "Countrymen-Already the combat for on existence, for our liberty, and for our independence, has begun; it is perhaps the last. Our first fixed purpose is gloriously to conquer or to die: and we have sworn that if it should please individual (espatez) who would bring him ten bras Winnam He av and Canton Pecket and linery: Moses, a negrouged $1, also well ac-Providence to permit us to be subdued, that, like unto the Jews after the destruction of Jarusalem, we will never cease to be Poles. We swear now that we will hide our nationality deep in our hearts from the eyes of our enemies-but that never will a member of our great but unfortunate nation unite himself with our enemies. either by blood or by friendship-that never shall want or contempt bring us or our latest descendants to deny Poland-but that we will look upon one another as brothers, help one another in toil-and in the midst of misfortune and in misery, live upon the recollections of the past and present, and preserve the moral presence forever, and rather disperse over the face of the outh than languish in slavery. May those powers who are favorable to us at least obtain this much-that after our fall we may be permitted to leave the sacred land of our fathers, with our possessions and goods. The Diet shall prescribe the form of our oath. The Diet shad take it with the Polish people, and shall order it to be read from the pulpit. The Minister of Foreign Affairs shall address notes to England & France, exhorting those powers, that, in the event of defeat, the remains of our nation, as well as the prisoners, shall be set at liberty, and permitted to leave our fatherland, profuned by the enemy; sorked by the blood of the Poles and strewed with their bones-that we may sell without hindrance our possessions and goods, and carry with us what we can take away. These Powr. ten centuries have guarded Europe on the East and in the North; and the con merer will rejoice to be rid of a generation which must ever hate him. If he possesses the magnanimity which he professes to the world, he will willingly do a deed contributing alike to his glory and to his interest. Those amougst us whom Providence shall permit to survive, or who shall be wounded and in prison, will, with eyes

We have been witnesses to the acts of Parbarison, which certainly ought not to have been expected in Europe in a war in the 19th century. The Russians, who entered Putowy, pillaged the houses, set fire to the buildings, violated the women, and made prisoners of the men, and this without any thing to enrage them, the inhabitants having furnished them during their stay with all that they deman led. It is thus that the fine promises contained in their Pociama tions are realised. And were these horr irs committed by Kalmucs or Boskirs, or even by irreg ular soldiery? Not at all; it was regular troops who committed these excesses by the express or ders of their commanders. They revenged themselves upon those who a few days previous ly had been witnesses to their flight when they were defended by Col. Larowski. The next day was devoted to the completion of the ruin of the town, and the pillage of the castle; but they did not long escape the vengeance of heaven, for they were completely defeated by the corps of Gen. Dwernicki, which very soon arrived. Our columns were led by the Curate of Wiostowice, a respectable old man, bearing a cross instead of a banner, and our young warriors fought with unexampled courage disposing every danger. and even, in the midst of a most murderons fire. making their way through the windows of the houses where their enemies had taken refuge.-All the ladies who where at the Castle in the midst of the terrible combat were prepared for death; they, however, put on their ball dresses, and awaited the issue of the battle, -Providence blessed our efforts-the invaders were repulsed with great loss; but previous to retreating in order to be revenged for having been prevented from pillaging and destroying the Castle, they directed two discharges of artillery among the temales who were in it. We still hear the sound of cannon. Many Russian prisoners have passed through the town, and our soldiers, who escort them, say that a dreadful alarm prevails among the whole corps of Kreutz.

General Szembeck was thrown down with his horse, by a sudden attack made by the enemy's cavalry but recovering himself at the instant, he fired his carbine, killed several Russians, and resumed the command of his corps, without the least wound.
