The French Chamber of Deputies were still engaged in debating the law regulating elections. The subject of the Port Office and the Black Cabinet had been laid aside.

The energetic measures of Count Capo d'Istria, have resulted in putting down piracy almost entirely. It would not be strange if those parts should be again infested, in consequence of the extreme misery which reigns in most of the islands and the great number of soldiers and sailors condemned to inactivity since the almost total cessation of hostilities against the Turks.

New Commercial Regulation at Havana.

[Extract of a letter.]—An important regulation has just been put in force here, which subjects Flour from Santander, in foreign bottoms, to two thirds of the duty on Foreign Flour, instead of the trifling duty hitherto levied of four rials per barrel. This places the competition between the two descriptions of Flour on a more equal footing.—On this change in the duties we find the following remarks in the Baltimore American:—

By the last advice it appears that a duty of $5 per bbl. is now imposed at Havana upon all Spanish Flour, imported in foreign bottoms.—Hitherto it paid only 3 rs. per bbl. This order has been given in consequence of a deficit of $300,000 during the last year in the revenue, upon the article of Flour.—American Flour having been virtually excluded. This new impost of duty will occasionally permit us to ship our staple to Havana; for, whenever the difference in price is equal to the difference in the duties, it comes fairly into competition.

From the National Intelligencer of Wednesday.

We present to our readers, to-day, a Treaty between the United States and the Free Hanseatic Republics of Hamburg, Lubeck, and Bremen, negotiated last December, by Mr. Clay, and Mr. Rumpff the Minister of those republics. The exchange of its ratifications was made on Monday. Thus the present Secretary of State, amid the other arduous duties of his office, has found time to negotiate at Washington, during the 3 years of the present administration, four Treaties, including a Treaty with Prussia, which is understood to have been recently concluded; a greater number than had been concluded with Foreign Powers, at the seat of government of the United States, since the establishment of the Constitution. All these four treaties are believed to have received the unanimous advice and consent of the Senate, which is no slight testimony to their merits, considering that a majority of that body is claimed by the opposition. Their provisions are marked by the highest liberality, and they embrace, for the first time, the great principle of perfect equality between the national and foreign vessels, in the transportation of all commodities, without reference to the country of their origin. Thus, an American vessel is not limited to the produce of the United States, but may carry into or bring from the ports of the other parties the produce of any part of the globe on the same terms with national vessels, and so, reciprocally, as to those vessels in the ports of the United States. If this principle were universally introduced, there would be a perfect freedom and equality in navigation, among all nations. It is to be regretted that any of the maritime powers should oppose its adoption. None resist it more firmly than Great British.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Clay to Mr. Daniel P. Cook, dated Department of State, Washington March 12th, 1827. "The very great interest which the United States have in the future fortures of Cuba, and the present dangers to which that Island is exposed from foreign attack, as well as from internal commotion, render it expedient that this Government should have some confidential agent on the spot, who can communicate, from time to time, whatever may be likely to affect its condition. The President, entertaining a high opinion of your prudence, patriotism, and ability, was desirous to avail the public of your services on this occasion, and therefore directed me to propose the commission to you. Having determined to accept it, you will be pleased to proceed, without unnecessary delay, to the Havana, from such port of the United States as may appear to you most convenient and agreeable. It is deemed best that your agency should not be publicly known; as, by keeping it secret, you will be more able to penetrate the views and designs of parties and persons, and collect that information which we desire to possess. But a commission is, nevertheless, herewith transmitted, to be used, if necessary, for the protection and safety of your person, or in any emergency in which it may appear to you to be proper to exhibit it; and a cypher is likewise sent, with directions for its use, to be employed in your despatches, whenever you may deem it advisable.

The objects to which you will particularly direct your attention, and on which it is desirable to obtain all the information, that may be practicable, are—

1st. The state of the population of the Island, exhibiting the relative numbers of the various castes, their dispositions towards each other, education, intelligence, &c.

2d. The condition of its agriculture, extent of foreign commerce, and proportion of good land, yet waste and in cultivation.

3d. The state of political parties in the Island, their views with regard to a continuation of the existing connexion with Spain, or in favor of Independence, or towards the new American Republics; and especially, whether a preference exists, and on what account, for one of those Republics, and an aversion towards another of them. We have understood here, that a party in the Island is anxious that it should be connected with Mexico, and that a great repugnance exists among the inhabitants, to any connection with Colombia.

4th. What are the Spanish means of resisting an attack, should one be made by the combined or separate forces of Colombia and the United Mexican States? Would they find any succor or cooperation in the Island? and to what probable extent?

5th. What are the Spanish means of resistance, Naval and Military, if war should be the issue of her present relations with Great Britain, and the latter should attack Havana? And what are the dispositions of the inhabitants towards a Colonial connexion with Great Britain?

In particularizing these objects, it is not intended to exclude others which may present themselves to you. On the contrary, the President desires any sort of information which may tend to the formation of a correct estimate of the value of the Island; its resources, natural and artificial; its capacity to maintain its independence, or to resist any foreign attack with which it may be menaced; and the dispositions and wishes of its inhabitants, in respect to the continuance of its Colonial condition, to independence, or to a connexion with any, and which, of the new Republics.

The design of your agency being exclusively that of collecting and transmitting information to this Government, you will keep yourself aloof from, and entirely unconnected with, any of the parties within the Island.

It does not enter into the policy or views of the Government of the United States to give any stimulus or countenance to insurrectionary movements, if such be contemplated by any portion of its inhabitants. Or position being that of peace with Spain, and neutrality in the existing war between her and the new American Republics, fixes our duties in reference to any commotion which may be either meditated, or, in fact, may arise, in the Island. And if they should happen to be of a character, or to take a turn which would require of the United States, from the relations in which they stand to the Island, to interpose their power, it will be time enough for the Government here to consider and decide the nature of their intervention, when the exigency arises."

From the Philadelphia Gazette.

The New-York American of Thursday calls General Jackson "the victorious soldier, the remorseless commander, the violent and overbearing functionary, the illiterate, turbulent, licentious individual." Some of these are hard names. Upon Mr. Adams, the Evening Post has bestowed even harsher designations. What a people the Americans to be so broadly divided and fiercely engaged about such candidates for the office of President of their Union!

But the consolation is, that both the newspapers may err in their denunciations of the individuals; that the victorious soldier may not be illiterate and licentious, nor the experienced statesman traitorous, blundering, intriguing, &c.

Lord Kelley had a remarkable red face. One day Foote solicited him to look over his garden wall to ripen his melons.

Elopement.—A young gentleman, the grandson of a solicitor at Braintree, lately deceased, who, by his parsimony, accumulated about one hundred and fifty thousand pounds sterling in estates and money, to which the youth will be entitled when of age, eloped on the 9th ult. with the daughter of the landlord of the Horn Inn. The lady is said to be about 16, and the young man is a ward in Chancery. They are supposed to have reached the opposite coast. [London Paper.]
