Important Inventors.—Mr. William Keane, of Havestryw, has in conjunction with Mr Thaddeus Bellegis, obtained letters patent for a machine for cutting at Awa, which probably excels any thing of the life, sew in use in Europe or America. The principles of the machine consists in circular dies, which are a stotient towards each other, while, at the same time, they make upwards of 500 revolutions a minut. They sake receive the screw at the top of a cest iron not iswisich they are secured, and when it obtains its proper thread, it is thrown off by means of an inner issually and another instantly takes its place, the dies preserving their usual velecity, without changing their gotters. The saving of screw is snopher important consisteration in favor of these machines, as it is included to spoil one upon them.
