urchase of Louisiana? Why should it therefore con-inus to be neglected?

Owing to this neglect the bed of the river is annually ising. In 1738 there were 35 feet water on the bar; a 1767 there were 32; in 1836 there were 16; and in 335 there are but 11 or 12. This gradual diminution s not beneficial to the commerce of New Orleans; and unfortunately this has been too clearly manifested uring the past winter, in the number of wrecks, de-sys and disasters to which ships were subjected at the falize. Yet our merchants remain inactive with folded rms, depending on the ille chances of destiny in their tvor—spiritiess, dissipited, and careless as transient isitors who come for a couple of years to speculate on be chances of wealth.

change; for the waters of the gulf at that place run a kind off whirlpool, from the tendency of the ulf stream, produced by the trade winds; and from he body of water of the gulf at the Mississippitence though these are probably from 25 to 30 fathoms jouth of water opposition this city, there are scarcily four five at the descriptions and even the death is five at the deepest bars and even the depth is nually becoming leasened from the trees deposited the the and the alluvion, both of which have now remed numerous islands which also obstruct the naviation; and may soon effectivally impede it, if timely recautions be not used.

Having ascertained the causes of the obstructions Having ascertained the causes of the obstructions be remedy is indicated. If the navigation of the Missippi by the Balize is not foregone by apone substitute outlet, it will not only be necessary to remove the fits and alluvion at the bars, but to provent hereafter eier deposit and consection. For this purpose, it could absolutely be indispensable to project a melionion of the entire river with its tributaries, as far as racticable. The river from its source to the gulf is bout 300 miles long; and is subject to various routes ad currents which might easily be assimilated or con-olled. The current of the river is about 5 or 5 miles a hour in high water; and scarcely two in low: yet it much stronger and more variable where shoals, interes and islands narrow its hreadth. These are so numerous in Louisians. By glancing at the map, you have not travelled the routs, you will perceive that the bends in Felicians, Berville, Baton Rouge, such by diminishing the distance; and that though the pward navigation might be therefore improved, the swinward would be interesty injured. That this inferiore is conjucted in, and against apportunes: for those and injure and increase the state would be thoroughly cleansed, which could not be delighted the streets were macadamized or differently coorstructed. The great advantage of such pavements has been tested on the Middlesex and Ensex road, leading out of London, which for thirteen years required the small expeptiture of pinety six dollars to keep it in perfect order—at the expiration of which period the ston us did not appear worn in the subtest degree.

Two hundred and fifty the sund to appear a normally for 13 years, over a trailing for tone, passing all text time on a single track, and during that period the cost of repair on the whole road did not exceed the sam stated. The result of numerous trisls on a viall paved granite road, prove that in an inclination of it in 155, with a wagon and load of 4 tons, the firction close set exceed 14 his per ton, or 1-180th of the whole weight moved, and is not more than upon the heast constructed edge railway. The size of the wheels and absence of the finethe giving this favorable comparison with the railroad. Other experiments on such a paved road, ascending at the rate of 1 in 155, gave 6 tons as the load of a small horse weighing only 4i cwt. A more powerful saimal, whose weight was 14 cwt drew 13 tons up the same ascent in 3 wagoon, at the rate of 4 miles an hour. The useful effect of an ordinary horse working at the rate of 4 miles per hour up an inclined granite paved road, of 1 in 18, is found to exceed somewhat of six tons. A road of this charactor has been substituted for and found an answer a botter purpose than a railroad, answering all the perposes without any of the serious objections to railroads in the street of cities. The actual were of the stone forming the ways of the Commercial road, with all the trade to and from the East and West India docks of London, daring a period of 17 months, was found to be only a six-hundredth of an inch.
