NEW ORLEANS,
THURSDAY, MORNING May 11, 1837.

The Legislature.

We do most anxiously and sincerely wish that the legislature would consult with the presidents, cashiers, directors and controlers the legislature. Such a course would infallibly flow from their deliberations on the present financial crisis; some light at least would be shed upon the situation of affairs generally and that, a most great desideratum with the public.

Improvement Bank.

We are happy to observe that this institution continues to pay specie for its notes of five and ten dollars, and for notes of a higher denomination a proportion of specie equal in amount to what was usually asked for by residents of the city before the public mind was affected by a panic. It is to be regretted that all the Banks have not adopted the plan of paying specie for their small notes. We cannot believe that any insuperable difficulty lies in the way, and the advantages which would center upon the public is incalculable. The want of a metallic circulation among the laboring classes already begins to be felt in a most serious manner. Provisions in the market are becoming scarce and dear. We heard a respectable butcher declare two days ago that he would slaughter no more cattle, as he could get but little silver for his meat, and would not sell for bank notes. It is the same thing in the vegetable market. There is a lamentable falling off in the supply of articles in that line, which have heretofore been exhibited in the greatest abundance. If, as the presidents of the suspended banks declare in their excuse, they stopped for the public good, the public good imperiously requires that they should now exchange at least their five dollar notes for silver.

Consolidated Bank.

Under ordinary circumstances to calumniate the credit of a bank would be actionable at law: at this time to defame one of the most respectable institutions of the city is a crime. Since last Monday the True American persists, in spite of positive evidence, to range the Consolidated Association among those banks that have entirely suspended specie payments. Can this be ignorance or malice? We shall not take the trouble to decide this question: but surely it is neither right nor just. The Consolidated Association has not escaped one memorable epoch of its obligations in specie. Nothing can authorise a newspaper to persist for four days in an assertion which is contradicted by facts. In the meantime the calumny is circulated, while that respectable institution is able to afford relief to any bank that needs it.

Nothing can authorise a newspaper to persist for four days in an assertion which is contradicted by facts. In the meantime the calumny is circulated, while that respectable institution is able to afford relief to any bank that needs it.

LOOK OUT FOR COUNTERFEITS.

We yesterday saw a five dollar note of the Gas Light Bank, whice had been altered to a fifty by pasting 50 over the original 5. The alteration was executed so dingly well executed, and would deceive all but a practised eye. It is well to observe that the fives of this bank have the figure of a steamboat at the bottom of the note, while the fifties have the figure of a bull dog in the same place.

Look out for thieves.

A well dressed young man was last morning down the stairs of the North American Hotel by a gentleman going up. The former had a large bundle of clothes under his arm, and being asked what he was doing He answered that he was a tailor—he was stopped, and the gutard being sent for he was lodged in jail. It appeared that he had stolen a quantity of valuable clothing from three several rooms.

One of the Causes.

A writer in the New York Evening Post declares that during the last five years twenty millions of dollars have been expended by merchants of that city in the purchase of luxuries to pamper the appetite, and luxury for display of foreign growth or manufacture, which have been a positive injury to their health and morals, which are now of no value to them, and are useless of their daily fare to bestows to point out to others the absurdity which they have stumbled. Besides the sum, twenty millions more have been expended by the same moneaming the mechanics and manufacturers of New York for ornamental work of various kinds, which persons of THE WEALTH alone are justified in buying, and the effect of this unnatural stimulus is already beginning to be seen in a petition presented to the city council by 238 journeymen out of employment and destitute of bread. There are also about 10,000 persons in that city deprived of the means of obtaining their daily bread, wives and children of mechanics, recently engaged in the manufacture of fancy work for these landed nabobs. These were enticed by high wages, bestowed by that false liberality which generally accompanies wealth obtained without labor, to engage in this business, which now falls to the ground with its frail supporters, and their occupation is gone. There are also instances of mechanics having on hand large quantit es of goods, made by order of some of these fancied nabobs in an exclusive style, which are now left unsaleable on their hands. Others, and those not a few, have paid the mechanics for the furniture of their splendid houses in proportion which is now little better than waste paper—and the unprecedented number of auction sales of furniture, in the catalogues of some of which is shamelessly protruded the extravagant cost, discourages many manufacturers of less costly goods, and they are consequently discharging their journeymen. This is only the effect on one branch of industry. It would be no difficult matter for any one, who would investigate into other branches of industry affected by the present pressure, to trace most of the evils that hang over them to the extravagance of men living beyond the means. This is a dreadful picture of the effects of the extravagance of one portion of a community operating upon the other and more numerous portions.—We have heard of one of these soap bubble nabobs in New York who paid $30,000 for the furniture and decorations of one room, one white sale of which was a continuous looking glass, the plates of which were imported from France at a cost which would startle some of the minor princes of Europe. These $30,000 were the cost of fitting up one room only! The rest of his house was furnished in a corresponding style of splendour and magnificence. Where this same luxurious nabob, preluding gee dupes on great occasions, when he wanted to exhibit his finery to some great man from Europe—or rather rich man—for rich and great are synonimous terms in the vocabulary of those learned and well-bred personas—or when he expected to astonish his own less ostentatious countrymen, and to excite their admiration and envy, this dinner table was covered with GOLD PLATE, which had been procured at Paris or London at an expence which would make the first nobleman of England pause.

There can be no objection to a man's using his own money or property in any manner that pleases him provided no other individual be injuriously affected by the mode of living. In this instance it is shown by the result, that all these luxuries and useless accessories of mere parade were purchased with other people's money.—And yet these are the men who speak of sinking war upon their country because, as they erroneously allege, the action of the government has arrested their career of extravagance and folly. They say ghost of civil war—they merely dreams sent of treason; men who could thus pamper themselves in gross enjoyments—for they are gross—and nothing but grossness is suitable to the minds of these people, who are incapable of understanding real refinementsin taste, in manners, in conduct or in amusements—such men were never intended to get the world on fire by their eloquence, or their valor. The sound part of the community, will always be too many for them—even the loco-focos would have both the power and the will to crush them if they should ever raise their petrucidal arms against the laws of their country.

Another Musical Prodigy.

A young German has recently appeared in Paris, who has caused so much sensation by his performances on the piano, as Paganini did by the violin. Some previous contemporaries assert that the handsome and feminine face of the young man has had as much influence as his masterly performances in procuring the suffrages of the ladies. At all events his musical genius we all the rage in the French capital. He is said to be like only one who can give full effect to Beethoven's concertos and symphonies. One of the Paris papers speaks of an agency of torrent, terror and wrest caused by this artist while playing Beethoven's solemn music in a room completely darkened to give a greater luxury to the imaginary pain.

LATEST FROM TEXAS.

We have received files of papers from Houston of the 9th instant and from Velasco of the 4th. The Herald contains at full length the message of President Houston to congress on the meeting of that body. It gives an animated account of the flourishing state of the republic and the efficient condition of its army, which, he says, is able to meet and vanquish any foe. We may probably lay this document before our readers in the next number of the Bee.

A formal proclamation Velasco on the 13th May, that fleets Arista was restored to power in Matamoras and the independence was acknowledged by the Mexican government. It was rumored also that several Mexicans had agreed at the Texian head quarters with a flag of truce and official despatches relative to the above intelligence and that Colonel Joseph Rowell had passed through Brazoria on his way to the town of Houston, with the papers alluded to in his possession, and some of the Mexicans of the company. The editor of the Velasco Herald doubts the truth of the boat's loss with a degree of credit to strengthen this belief.

The Velasco Herald of the 27th ult. states that a Kickapoo Indians had been at head quarters and entered into a treaty of alliance with the Texas army. The same paper states that the army still actively encamp on the Nueces river to receive supplies &c from. &c. There were 2000 men who received rations at head quarters, and at the posts of Bexar, Copano, &c there were 500 more.

Forty men, mostly seamen, had been drafted from the army to man the vessels of war at Galveston—They men would put the navy on a better footing than it had heretofore been said available it to man the ships.

Sunday Sam Houston was got off the beach [illegible] much injury, the ship is said to be the property of [illegible] being repaired and would soon be ready for sea.

The same paper from which we have quoted the Velasco Herald of the 27th April's expresses no more than the usual suspense, impossible any of the Texian Caesar have fallen into the hands of the Mexicans.

An engagement was witnessed by the citizens of Galveston on the 17th April, between the Texian and Mexican schooners of the former was [illegible] the latter [illegible] to the westward.

The schooner Fiden, with emigrants for Texas ran ashore on Galveston Island on the 13th April. A story is told in the Herald, about her being boarded by a Mexican naval officer the day before, who returned on board his brig and [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] of Big, which [illegible] to the [illegible] contributed to the present amicable state of affairs.
