An enemy combatant has been defined as "an individual who was part of or supporting the Taliban or al Qaida forces, or associated forces that are engaged in hostilities against the United States or its coalition partners. This includes any person who committed a belligerent act or has directly supported hostilities in aid of enemy armed forces."
3. The United States Government has previously determined that the detainee is an enemy combatant. This determination is based on information possessed by the United States that indicates that the detainee is a member of al Qaida and supported military operations against the United States or its coalition partners.

The detainee is a member of al Qaida and supported military operations against the United States or its coalition partners:

1. In July 2001, and using a falsified Pakistani travel visa, the detainee traveled from France to London to Pakistan and finally into Jalalabad, Afghanistan.
2. The detainee traveled with other al Qaida recruits, but they were instructed to "ignore each other during the voyage."
3. When the detainee arrived in Jalalabad, he and his traveling companions were sent to the "House of the Algerians."
4. While at this location, an instructor showed the detainee how to de-assemble and re-assemble a Kalashnikov.
5. In August of 2001, the detainee left by taxi for Kandahar, Afghanistan, via Kabul, to begin their training.
6. The detainee waited for ten days in Kandahar so that a larger group of around thirty people could jointly undergo training, but soon traveled back to Jalalabad.
7. In November, as the city of Jalalabad was falling, the detainee escaped to the Tora Bora Mountains and remained there during the bombardment by coalition forces.

8. The Pakistani Military Authorities arrested the detainee as he and a group of other men were trying to cross the border from Afghanistan into Pakistan.

4. The detainee has the opportunity to contest his designation as an enemy combatant. The Tribunal will endeavor to arrange for the presence of any reasonably available witnesses or evidence that the detainee desires to call or introduce to prove that he is not an enemy combatant. The Tribunal President will determine the reasonable availability of evidence or witnesses.
