THE BEE.
NEW-ORLEANS
WEDNESDAY MORNING, DEC. 13, 1837.

We shall go more to-day than yesterday to ask the attention of our readers to the concerns of the Bank of the United States. Commercial men, in fact, all classes of our community, are so deeply and personally to the mind of every individual in this nation. His views of our relations with foreign nations are long-sighted and profound, and with the same wisdom he seems to ensure to each, the full, round measure of the earth's eastern hemisphere, and the long, round measure of the earth's western hemisphere, and the long, round measure of the earth's western hemisphere, and the long, round measure of the earth's western
