WHEN WILL CONSUMERS TURN COME?

The senate passed the food control bill Saturday night and the consumers of food will soon begin to expect the long-promised relief...

Something is radically wrong when the price of foodstuff is growing higher in the United States, the point of its origin, and lower in Great Britain...

The minimum price fixed for wheat gives the consumer the absolute assurance that he will buy no flour during the next two years for less than eight dollars a barrel...

control bill, but Mr. Hoover the slated food controller has been busy denying that any such step is intended.

It is only fair and just, however, that if the price of wheat to the consumer is fixed, to insure him a proper return for his labor, the price at which flour shall sell to the consumer should also be fixed.

LOUISIANA OPINION

No Time for Building Abbeville Meridional: When ever the claims of Alexandria are properly placed before the people we are of the opinion the capital will be located there...

A Combination Flivver

Every Town Has These

Lake Arthur Herald: Buried some place in the archives of the town council proceedings is a speed ordinance that is being broken every day since the gravel roads have made rapid transit on First street possible.

Must Obey Federal Regulations

Baton Rouge State Times: The federal government will probably make good its threat to withdraw its co-operation unless the 14-day dipping period is substituted for the 21-day period.

Don't Make Them; It Doesn't Pay

St. Helena Echo: We want to make some sort of excuse for the Echo this week, but can't think what to say.

Talk of Belling the Cat

Madison Journal: The boys at Baton Rouge talk about removing Uncle Joe Ransdell's sculp as if the job was as easy as peeling an onion.
