THE DIFFERENCE.

Rhode Island has gone Democratic, unlike Connecticut; yet Rhode Island naturally more inclined to Black Republicanism than Connecticut. A political revolution was effected in the one, because a policy was pursued precisely the reverse of that adopted in the other. In Connecticut the candidate for Governor was a conservative Administration Democrat; the ticket generally belonged to the same wing; the speeches were chiefly in laudation of the President; the parts failed to succeed, in spite of a desperate and admirable organized effort. Rhode Island the Democrats carried by a clear and unmistakable majority. Instead of making a Buchanan Democrat, they secured the election of Dr. Whipple who had been an Old Line Whig and a member of the American party, and who had joined the Democracy when he declared that every candidate of national reputation was absorbed by the Opposition. The whole force was concentrated upon Mr. Seward; not only the votes of the Democrats themselves but those of large numbers of Whigs and Americans who could no longer affiliate with a purely sectional organization. During the canvass of it every Southern tongue was careful to keep on the back ground while strong Union sentiments were urged by the Democratic speakers; and the putting on a tendency of Abolitionism in the strengthening the affectionate of the people from our own element and in rallying up and fraternizing of spirit was thoroughly demonstrated by the triumph.

Rhode Island can be kept in the Democratic ranks and Connecticut can be redeemed but only on the plans and projects of such journals as the "Jefferson Mirror, the Richmond Enquirer and other expositors of what are called Southern state Rights principles." If the Democratic party is blinded by sectional fanaticism that any portion whatever of the non-slaveholding States can be expelled or driven into the support of a Presidential candidate, a Congressional majority, a State ticket and private citizens in the Territories platform we predict disunion. Let the experiment be tried and Yulee will discover in the course of a few months on grounds fallacious that can admit of no cavil, that Douglas will discover that he has been duped, that Johnson will expend their wrath in a denunciation to the Southern Democracy, that Hunter will accept the compromise and to make the concession acceptable or desire a victory near at hand. They are quite shrewd enough to see the coming Presidential election can be made a central point upon a programme that will be satisfying. But they be Southern men who see clearly enough, the coming crisis and a perfectly prepared party. Their desperate and chimerical as are the self-styled Democrats in the exclusive opposition to principles. Although they constitute an immensity of the Democratic party, the misdirection and limitation impel them to check the right of affiliating with them in every Northern state who does not endorse their peculiar and sectional creed. They assert they are the blunt honesty of the Charleston platform, which openly declares that there is no platform (save the Constitution) which can be erected upon the South which will not be a platform for Abolitionism in the North, and hence to ask a man from seeking delegates to the Charleston Convention, practically they assert the same opinion, since they are willing to withdraw from the nominating body, break up the Convention, destroy the party and encounter certain defeat, if they fail to obtain all they demand.

We entertain an abiding hope that these unnecessary results will be disappointed. We are not without faith in the discretion and the common sense of the large majority of the delegates to the Charleston Convention. They will put down the most acute trouble with the cars nothing for the Union and the Democratic party, and would sacrifice both rather than yield one jot of the principles upon the platform. Is this not so? Answer, they cry. They ask for a Southern sectional candidate or for a Northern one standing upon a sectional platform. They are assured that success will be impossible with such a doctrine and such a programme. They themselves have declared over and over again that the triumph of the Black Republicans ought to be, and will be an adequate cause for the dissolution of the Union. Yet they are engrossed in plotting to promote disastrous a result by diplomatic intercourse with South Carolina, by securing the secession of principles which must leave the Democracy a minority in the electoral colleges. In short, their argument amounts to this: "Our tenets will lose in the entire North, and will become the election of Seward or some other abolitionist. This will endanger, perhaps destroy the Union. Nevertheless we must open a candidate and a platform to our liking, and are reckless of the consequences." If this sort of logic satisfies the majority of the members of the Charleston Convention, we must mistake their temper and their principles. We are confident they will in their deliberations consult Northern as well as extreme Southern sentiments, and apply to the Presidential contest those principles which were successfully used in Rhode Island to concentrate all the conservative elements, and rescue the State from the power of the Black Republicans.
