NEW ORLEANS, SEPTEMBER 4, 1867.

YELLOW FEVER.

In several newspapers published in this city, we have recently seen some articles, which are calculated to excite the apprehensions of the people, and to create a panic in the minds of the community.

It is true, that the disease has been reported in several places, but it is not necessary to suppose that it will spread to this city.

The authorities of this city are fully prepared to meet any emergency, and to take such measures as may be necessary to prevent the disease from spreading.

We have no reason to believe that the disease will be introduced into this city, and we have no reason to believe that it will spread to this city.

The people of this city should not be alarmed, and they should not be influenced by the reports of the newspapers.
