

MANUFACTURE OF SUGAR.

The following is a translation of the report of the Commission on the Manufacture of Sugar, presented to the General Council on November 28, 1849. The report details the process of sugar production, from the cultivation of sugarcane to the final refining and packaging of sugar. It discusses the various stages of the process, including the use of machinery, the role of labor, and the impact of different weather conditions on the yield and quality of the sugar. The report also addresses the economic aspects of the industry, such as the prices of raw materials and the competition from foreign markets. The text is written in a formal, official style, typical of government reports of that era.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

A fatal accident occurred on Monday last, when a man named John White, of the firm of White & Co., was killed by a falling beam in the sugar mill. The accident took place while the mill was in operation, and the victim was struck on the head by a heavy wooden beam that had become loose. The report describes the circumstances of the accident and the condition of the mill at the time. It also mentions the efforts of the mill owners to prevent such accidents in the future, including the installation of safety devices and the implementation of strict safety protocols. The report is a detailed account of the incident, providing a clear picture of what happened and the potential causes.
