SEAM BOAT LAW.

On the 13th instant, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, sitting in New Orleans, Louisiana, rendered its decision in the case of the United States vs. the Seaman's Union, Local 1313, et al., which was argued on October 10, 1938.

The court, in its opinion, rendered by Judge C. A. Linder, held that the National Labor Relations Board's order requiring the Seaman's Union to recognize the National Maritime Union as the exclusive bargaining agent for the seamen on the coastwise trade was not valid.

The court found that the Seaman's Union was a bona fide labor organization and that the National Maritime Union was not a bona fide labor organization. Therefore, the NLRB's order was not valid.

The court also held that the Seaman's Union was not an unfair labor practice under the National Labor Relations Act. The court found that the Seaman's Union was not discriminating against any seaman and was not interfering with the rights of any seaman.

The court further held that the Seaman's Union was not an unfair labor practice under the National Labor Relations Act. The court found that the Seaman's Union was not discriminating against any seaman and was not interfering with the rights of any seaman.
