

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

EXPORTS.
Cotton, 100,000 bales; tobacco, 100,000 lbs.;
salt, 100,000 bushels; flour, 100,000 bushels;
lumber, 100,000 feet; iron, 100,000 lbs.; coal, 100,000 bushels; sugar, 100,000 lbs.; cottonseed, 100,000 bushels; cotton oil, 100,000 bushels;

IMPORTS.
Cotton, 100,000 bales; tobacco, 100,000 lbs.;
salt, 100,000 bushels; flour, 100,000 bushels;
lumber, 100,000 feet; iron, 100,000 lbs.; coal, 100,000 bushels; sugar, 100,000 lbs.; cottonseed,
100,000 bushels; cotton oil, 100,000 bushels;

EXPORTS FROM THE INTERIOR.
Cotton, 100,000 bales; tobacco, 100,000 lbs.;
salt, 100,000 bushels; flour, 100,000 bushels;
lumber, 100,000 feet; iron, 100,000 lbs.; coal, 100,000 bushels; sugar, 100,000 lbs.; cottonseed,
100,000 bushels; cotton oil, 100,000 bushels;

MARINE INTELLIGENCE.
PORT OF NEW-ORLEANS.

NEW-ORLEANS BEE
OFFICIAL JOURNAL OF THE STATE AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT.

BY BULLITT, MAGNUS & CO.
No. 16, Chartres Street.

TYPEFED PAPER PURCHASED EXCLUSIVELY.

TODAY IS COMMENDED AND PRAYED FOR.

FOR OXYGEN.
HENRY JOHNSON.

NW-ORLEANS MORNING, SEPT. 16, 1841.

THE FEVER-CHARITABLE ASSOCIA-TION.

It has been our fortune to visit in New Orleans the last two years. During this period we have seen with interest the progress of the fatal epidemic to which society is unfortunately subject; but we have rarely, if ever, held such faithful desolation as its tragedy, in the audacity of its attacks and the indiscriminate ruthlessness with which it pro-palls rapidly with which it has extended from hospital into private, it has rarely ever been exceeded. The heat is absolutely sickening, and humanity shudders at the scenes of misery and affliction to which it has produced.

The heat has arrived, four, five, half a hundred consecutive summers in New Orleans, and had received unequalled from the violations of former years, how starkly beneath its relentless power, it seems to spare none save natives of Louisiana, and residents who have already passed through the portals of the land, as they were engaged in field on one side.

We have taken the trouble to compare the mortality of the present summer with that of 1829 and '30—both years in which the yellow fever reigned with unceasing violence. The weekly number of deaths thus far exceeded nearly a third, that of 1829, and a greater than that of 1837, it was the paucity of the non-resident population.

At the worst period of the epidemic of 1829, the toll of mortality did not exceed 200 per week.

The last weekly statement for this year shows a mortality of 240, and the fact for this week will more probably demonstrate an increase of forty or fifty more.

It is more than usually admitted, in medical men, that the fever is more controllable than usual.

The remedial agents which have proved so successful, are now violent and旗帜鲜明.

We have, therefore, no hesitation to trust the skill and the art of our physicians to overcome the difficulty.

The skill and ingenuity of

our physicians, and their

devotion to the welfare of

their patients, will, we

trust, be equal to the task.

What is the pity!

What is the pity that the

thought of the suffering which has led to the deplorable condition of the country. What is the thought of the pain which we have been fortunate enough to escape.

What is the pity that the

fever is more controllable than usual.

What is the pity that the

remedies which have

proved so successful, are

now violent and旗帜鲜明.

What is the pity that the

skill and ingenuity of

our physicians, and their

devotion to the welfare of

their patients, will, we

trust, be equal to the task.

What is the pity?

What is the pity that the

thought of the suffering which has led to the

deplorable condition of the country.

What is the pity that the

fever is more controllable than usual.

What is the pity that the

remedies which have

proved so successful, are

now violent and旗帜鲜明.

What is the pity that the

skill and ingenuity of

our physicians, and their

devotion to the welfare of

their patients, will, we

trust, be equal to the task.

What is the pity?

What is the pity that the

thought of the suffering which has led to the

deplorable condition of the country.

What is the pity that the

fever is more controllable than usual.

What is the pity that the

remedies which have

proved so successful, are

now violent and旗帜鲜明.

What is the pity that the

skill and ingenuity of

our physicians, and their

devotion to the welfare of

their patients, will, we

trust, be equal to the task.

What is the pity?

What is the pity that the

thought of the suffering which has led to the

deplorable condition of the country.

What is the pity that the

fever is more controllable than usual.

What is the pity that the

remedies which have

proved so successful, are

now violent and旗帜鲜明.

What is the pity that the

skill and ingenuity of

our physicians, and their

devotion to the welfare of

their patients, will, we

trust, be equal to the task.

What is the pity?

What is the pity that the

thought of the suffering which has led to the

deplorable condition of the country.

What is the pity that the

fever is more controllable than usual.

What is the pity that the

remedies which have

proved so successful, are

now violent and旗帜鲜明.

What is the pity that the

skill and ingenuity of

our physicians, and their

devotion to the welfare of

their patients, will, we

trust, be equal to the task.

What is the pity?

What is the pity that the

thought of the suffering which has led to the

deplorable condition of the country.

What is the pity that the

fever is more controllable than usual.

What is the pity that the

remedies which have

proved so successful, are

now violent and旗帜鲜明.

What is the pity that the

skill and ingenuity of

our physicians, and their

devotion to the welfare of

their patients, will, we

trust, be equal to the task.

What is the pity?

What is the pity that the

thought of the suffering which has led to the

deplorable condition of the country.

What is the pity that the

fever is more controllable than usual.

What is the pity that the

remedies which have

proved so successful, are

now violent and旗帜鲜明.

What is the pity that the

skill and ingenuity of

our physicians, and their

devotion to the welfare of

their patients, will, we

trust, be equal to the task.

What is the pity?

What is the pity that the

thought of the suffering which has led to the

deplorable condition of the country.

What is the pity that the

fever is more controllable than usual.

What is the pity that the

remedies which have

proved so successful, are

now violent and旗帜鲜明.

What is the pity that the

skill and ingenuity of