Reporter FRINCHMEN: - The citizens of Louisiana, the daughter of France, appear before you to tender you their lively congratulations and the expressions of their profound admiration for the issue of that glorious revolution which has just elevated liberty to that throne so long occupied by despot-

On receiving the news of the great victory. all America thrilled with joy. But it was particularly in our own vast republic that the purest and most ardent enthusiasm was awakened in every bosom, the ancient ally, the faithful friend of the United States had at lenght regained her

When illustrious France suddenly rose in her might, and trampling under foot a hoary headed tyranny and the livery of gothic abuses, was seen to mount the ancient pedestal of her rights, and then with the proud mien and imposing attitude which nothing but thirty years of victory could inspire, to raise her majestic front to heaven, as if to present to it the sublime spectacle of her regeneration, one burst of applause proclaimed the admiration of the american people.

The old tri coloured banner, that banner associa-sed with the memory of past and the hope of future triumphs, was seen to wave over every American city; it announced to them that liberty was equally worshipped in both nations, and that the work of political emancipation was commenced.

Could the world, indeed, long remain enslaved when liberty had lighted her beacons, on the summit of the Capitol and of the constitutional palaes of France?

Frenchmen, your triumph which filled every portion of our great american family with joy was hailed with peculiar delight in Louisiana. Yes, the voice of France, whether in grief or in glory, ever finds an echo in Louisiana. We ell know that France ever fostered with matermal solicitude the prosperity of Louisiana. When necessity separated her from her bosom, she confided her to the nation most worthy of the trust, and no doubt felt an emotion of pride when that country which was once a colony of France. rose to the station of a sovereign state, and when star, was seen glittering on her forehead.

Free, independent and happy themselves, the eitizens of Louisiana blushed at the slavery and deplored the miseries of that nation to which their proceedings was immediately transmitted ton 30 hhds. and 5 bbls. Charleston 11 hhds.

Frenchmen, we honor those citizen balls and patriotic pavements by which paricidal power was forever prostrated. Glory to the Parisian population of all sexes and ages. Glory to France who declared and made herself free with the rapidity of an electric shock.

We cherish and venerate the names of the martyrs of liberty who fell during the three days. But we deplore not their fate; they are immortal, for is not the blood shed in defence of one's country the most glorious apotheosis? Honor and happiness to the citizen-King

New-York, March 10. Foreign Affairs .- The wind last evening taught our citizens to anticipate the arrival of the Liverpool packet of the 8th ultimo, this morning. But it has not come. The political intelligence which we may expect in her, will probably be of high moment. The ship, we understand, will not leave Liverpool till noon of the 10th, and ing to the Liverpool classification, viz: her news will be a week later. The expose of the new Ministry, on the subject of reform, was to be made on the 8th. We shall probably re ceive that. It will be rather too soon to receive iutelligence either of the submission of the Poles. or the onslaught of the Russians. But Belgium may have elected a King, and by flying in the teeth of the holy alliance, provoke an armed intervention-which of course would light up a general war. France is not quite ripe yet for another explosion-but it will come in due seaadjunct, Ireland, we may look for the first thril-

The admiration was redoubled when we learnt the Colonies.

It is quite too late to appeal to the national gov ernment for relief. She will grant no relief and ought to grant none. She is bound in hon though the whole of the territory in dispute had been awarded to Great Britain. But instead of this, far the greatest, as well as the most valuable part of it, has been given to the United States. To fly off from such a decision, (or indeed any other, to which we have voluntarily bebome a party, and which has been fairly made) would brand the nation with infamy, besides involving us in a bloody war.

If the good people of Maine wish the decision revoked, and the question placed on its former footing, we can tell them that Great Britain will gladly consent to such a repeal, and give us a million of dollars into the bargain. She will then permit us to choose our own mode of settling the question, and very likely would prefer that, in which the dominant principle is, that "might makes rights." To show the manner in which the subject is viewed by the "United Kingdom," (not the realm, but a paper published in London,) we quote the following paragraphs:

How there could be any question as to the we are at a loss to know, and it is the duty of will vanish before the sight of this ominous sign, this country for so many years, to explain. GENERAL REMARKS.—The Mississippi is rising slowly, and was yesterday noon at eighteen inches below ordinary high water mark. The weather since our last has been variable as to temperature; but generally favorable for outdoor business. Our market is well supplied with foreign and domestic merchandize of almost every description wanted here, and a fair business doing: still many articles are dall of sale, on account of the high price of freights.
