NEW ORLEANS:
THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1829.

From the N. York Journal of Commerce, May 21. AMERICA AND FRANCE.—We are not of the number who would wish to foment a war between the United States and France—because we are persuaded it is the true policy of our country to remain at peace. Neither are we of the number who believe that such a war is probable; because we are sure that the American government will require nothing inconsistent with the principles of justice, and we are not yet prepared to believe that the French nation will compromise its honor by finally withholding what the principles of justice require.

It is however undeniable, that hitherto the claims of our citizens upon France for spoiliations,—amounting it is said to more than 20,000,000 dollars—have been evaded by that government in a manner which promises very little for the future. And the patience, or rather remissness of our government in submitting to this evasion so often repeated has perhaps created an impression both at home and abroad, that nothing more is to be done; and that an amount of property equal to one third of the national debt, is to be sacrificed to the consideration of superior power, (if indeed it be so,) in the hands of our oppressors. But if in the spirit which has been manifested in some of our principal cities is the spirit of the nation, an appeal will be made to France, which she cannot pass over in silence. She will answer it,—either by conceding a just amount of the claims, or telling us to seek redress where we can find it. Either would be better than the course with which our negotiations have hitherto been met, and we care not how soon the matter is brought to a crisis.

As we said, we are not the advocates of war either in the abstract or between this country and France; neither do we believe that such a war is at all probable. But without reference to the result, we think it the solemn duty of our government, in justice to the many citizens who have been impoverished, and in justice to our national character, to make a speedy and earnest representation to the Court of France, which shall convince them that we are determined to pursue the subject until redress is obtained. We were in earnest with Spain,—and our claims have been satisfied by the cession of Florida. We were in earnest with Tripoli,—and we no longer pay tribute. Let us be in earnest with France, not as if influenced by passion, but urged on by the strength of principle; and if we do not greatly mis-calculate, justice will be done us.

It is worthy of remark that three of the most distinguished members of the Senate of the United States warmly attached to the present administration, have declined three of the highest diplomatic appointments in the gift of the Executive: Tazewell that of ambassador to England, Livingston to France, and Gov. Woodbury to Spain. The refusal of these brilliant distinctions by men so well worthy to wear them and so well qualified to perform the services they impose, and by men too in public life and of high political standing is an instance of moderate ambition well worth putting on record were it only for its singularity. To compare great things with small, it reminds us of a circumstance said to have happened at a Lord Mayor's dinner when the famous John Wilkes was Lord Mayor of London. Wilkes happened to ask one of the Aldermen if he should help him to calipash. The worthy official declined, observing that he should confine himself to a plate of beans. The Lord Mayor put the same question to another Alderman who sat near the first and who replied that he like his brother, perlered a vegetable dish. Wilkes then called upon the recording officer of the Common Council who by virtue of his station was present at the banquet and directed him to make an official entry upon the city archives, that during the Mayoralty of John Wilkes at a Lord Mayor's dinner two Aldermen had refused turtle.

THE AFFAIR AT MAHON.—The National Intelligencer contains an extract from "Le Somaphore," a Marseilles journal, of March 24, containing a similar account of the affair at Port Mahon, as was given in the long letter which we published a day or two since from Capt. Downes, commander of the ship Java. The concluding paragraphs are as follows:
The death of this brave officer, [Lieut. Mesnard] caused as much regret to the American officers as it could have caused to the French; and, as every one will see, there is nothing in all this affair that resembles assassination. All those who know the American Nation, know that such a crime does not belong either to its habits or its character.

The death of Lieut. Mesnard is not the only one that we have to regret. A sailor of the Java was also the victim of these deplorable conflicts. He was pierced through and through with a sword and expired a few hours afterwards. Captain Downes has acted in these circumstances with a prudence and a moderation, which, surely entitle him to the esteem of all men, who before making up an opinion on affair desire to understand properly the details of it. Since his arrival at Toulon, this prudence and moderation has not been lost sight of: he has offered to the Admiral not to permit even his officers to go on shore.

PRELIMINARY CONVENTION BETWEEN COLOMBIA AND PERU.—From the Mercantile Advertiser of this morning, we take a copy of the Convention or rather armistice, between these two powers, signed upon the field of battle, after a sanguinary conflict, in which the Peruvians suffered a signal defeat. According to the Colombian account eight thousand Peruvians were beaten by four thousand Colombians.
The principal articles of the Convention (says the Mercantile) are those which declare that neither power shall interfere with the government of the other; that the independence of the Bolivian Republic is acknowledged; that the Peruvian Army shall evacuate the soil of Colombia within 20 days; that plenipotentiaries on both sides shall meet at Guayaquil in May, to form a definitive treaty of alliance against all foreign invasion; and lastly, that the blockade against the Colombian ports shall cease on the day on which the commissioners shall meet at Guayaquil to settle the details of the definitive treaty. The most important part of the Convention to us, is that which raises the blockade of the Colombia ports, and of course takes off the trammels now imposed on our commerce with these ports, and as by Article 8 our Government is to be requested to act as a mediator, and guarantee the definitive treaty, there is no doubt that our intercourse with both countries will become more frequent and valuable.

FROM MATANZAS.—A letter from a very respectable house in Matanzas to the Editors of the Journal of Commerce dated April 25th, says, "Of late we have heard of no piracies committed on this coast. There seems to be an untiring vigilance on the part of the American government, and also of this government to suppress them. We have now a weekly convoy by the U. S. schooner Grampus, which is extended to all vessels without distinction of nation. Our city papers contain nothing worthy of translation." N. Y. Am.

Report from Hayti.—The last number of the African Repository contains some extracts from a report made by Thomas Kennedy, who has lately visited all the coloured families sent out to Hayti by the Society of Friends in North Carolina. Mr. Kennedy, a citizen of Wayne county in N. C., took out testimonials and instructions from the yearly meeting of Friends in the state. He was very civilly received by President Boyer. The condition of the coloured families from North Carolina he found bad enough, and the colonists very much dissatisfied. They complained of not having received the stipulated compensation from the proprietors of the lands and declared that they preferred their former condition of slave in North Carolina to their present situation.—Mr. Kennedy was not able to do any thing to improve their circumstances in that country. He attempted to take under his protection, with a view of removing them a family which he had formerly emancipated, and was treated with great indignity on the occasion.
Mr. Kennedy does not give a very favorable picture of the state of society in Hayti. He describes the country as possessing a soil of exceeding fertility, producing abundantly with little cultivation—the water sweet, the air pure, and the climate salubrious. The government he says, is a military despotism—he Congress a mere fudge—the laws better word than administered—the will of the President backed with an army of 40,000 men the law of the land—the agriculture neglected—the commerce declining—the manners and custom disagreeable—the mode of living in the country especially, poor and coarse—the people ignorant and conceited, practising polygamy—and the increase of the native population very small. Jour. of N. Y.
