The Sugar Planter of West Baton Bonge of opinion that there should be shade on the levee at New Orleans for the protection of of opinion that there should be shade on the levee at New Orleans for the probection of argar. We are of the same opinion. Our oct imporary misunderstands our position and the objections we have brought forward to the adoption by the City Council of the plan now before it. There ought to be adequate protection from the weather afforded to dil produce landed and shipped from our wharves. Open sheds are found on the wharves and quays of most of the great maritime ports of Europe, and as 15-ra we know to the contrary, of this country also. It is to the discredit of our city that they do not exist here. What we have objected to it, the granting of large and scoluire privileges to individuals, who for their pen smoll ment seek to build upon ground dedicated to public use, and who might turn these privileges to indicadvantage of the public. We are opposed to the owners of produce landing on our leves being compelled; whether they will or no, leves being compelled; whether they will or no.

Judge Dent, the Conservative Republican candidate for Gavernor of Mississippi, has written a letter defining his policy, in which he shows that he is a nair-mal Republican, opposed to the extreme proscription of his party, and places binself, unsquiversity, on the Walker platform of Virgins, advocating universal and exception of Virgins, advocating universal and the maintenance of Virgins, advocating universal and the maintenance of Virgins, advocating universal and the resident. Whalever disgreement there may be between Grant and the malignants in the Cahinet, concerning the convenient movement in the South, it is now altogether probable that the movement will succeed, provided far lections can be had in Mississippi and Texas.

The Concernatives have been so heartily endorred by the most prominent newspapers of a both parties in the Nothern States, that the Republican press cannot now change its point distinction and plain inconsistency and repudication of the party.
