ANDERSON'S RADBARDIA is in great repute, Partly for the Blood, and for the Phlegm, especially in Stomach, Ulcers, and Skin Diseases; Phlegm, Some Er-petous, Pimples, Bals., Mercureal Diseases.
Catarrhus Eruptions, Lesser Complications Bronchitis, Consumption, Female Complaints, Loss of Appetite, General Debility, &c.
This preparation is a very strong and powerful emetic, and a specific remedy most effectual said, the most salutary product most potent stimulant, that the vegetable kingdom affords; it has a singular power to neutralize poisons, such that one could hardly imagine, producing a compound differing entirely in character and properties from any other preparation, and yet so perfectly adapted to act under similar circumstances. The many well known merits of scorodii the most malignant character and violence, have been well observed, and are well known to all who have had experience of them; but the preparation of this medicine is far more powerful, and efficacious, than any other Scorodii that has hitherto been made, and its properties are more easily perceived, and more easily understood, than any other.

EDUCATION

the study of English grammar, and the best case of scrupulous and able teaching is to be found in the plan of the English Department. It is peculiarly remarkable that the English Department has been organized by a man who has had no previous experience in the teaching of English. The first professor of English at the University was Dr. E. H. Moraine, whose ability has been so highly appreciated in all institutions of this city, and in the public press, that his first class will be specially charged with the task of preparing the students for instruction in French will be costumed, and, under the direction of Messrs. Morris, G. A. and T. C. Atkinson.
