To the arrival of the ship cilympia, from Havre, September 12th, we have our files of Paris papers to 10th. The political intelligence ha sbeen anticipated by arrivals at New York.

re Argus republished, a few days since, in its French side, the letter which was written by Mr. Clay, more than a year ago, in reply to the demand of an anti-masonic committee, inquiring his sentiments of the merits or demerits of the masonic institution. The apparant object of our contemporary in reproducing that celebrated letter, at this time, is to refute an assertion which had been made by us, that Mr Clay is now courting the aid of the anti-masons It must be recollected, however, that at the time of writing that letter, Mr. Clay's chances were not so desperate as they have been rendered by the recent state elections in Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, and Missori, which have de-monatrated the impossibility of his obtaining a single electoral vote west of the mountains.

feated, not only in his own state, but throughout the west of nien who, within the last year, could find no epithe —"his own poor, poor west"!!—he turned his attention to the anti-masonic party of Pennsylvania and New York, summutten of all our toils in the National Republica (the same party, which, in the letter, republished by the party, we hesitate not to say that we can no longer act Argus, he could answer with so much scorn and contempt) -as his forlorn hope amidst the desolation that surrounded him. Accordingly we find, that in these two states, the anti-masons and Clayists are married in interests, having one and same electoral ticket, and but one candidate for gover por. We need not, we presume, turn over the files of the Argus, to prove, by its own declarations, that the electoral which two discordant factions, in Pennsylvania and New York, have cealesced are, to vote for Mr Claythey have been too frequent'y repeated to require to be re- dersigned have heretofore felt a sincere and honest produced; nor would it be prudent in the editor to gainsay pride in sustaining the Clay party, but they trust and the assertion which, vesterday morning, he "repeats, that believe that the above reasons will furnish a sufficient the assertion which, yesterday morning, he "repeats, that Pennsylvania is safe on our side." As his journal has justification to their friends and the public, for the Clay and Sargeant at its head, it is plain that he wishes to be understood as meaning that by the coalition already spoken of, "Pennsylvania is safe on the side of Mr. Clay,

The Argus will hardly dispute the fact that Mr. Clay is receiving the support of the anti-masons; for, it is eviden that, without their aid, he cannot obtain a single electoral vote. Even in Massachusetts those fanatics are more numerous than the Clayists; the same assertion will hold true in Rhode Island; and Vermont is wholly anti-masonic.masons Mr. Clav's stret absolutely nothing: with their aid it is "but the baseless against the masonic institution, as the abettors of "murder and treason," sudenly become reconciled to vote for a distinguished teason? But still he has her; and it is a matter of little importance who courted her to his embrace. But there are strong evidences that Mr. Clay was not altogether indifferent on the disregard of foreign criticism, and utter carelessness is brought forward upon the single ground of this opposition to masonry, "will, if elected, make a splendid president." Such a declaration is wholly inconsistent with a of the work, by entering into the analysis. Besides, it must not be forgotten that the editor of the New York Commercial Advertiser, bimself is a mason, and a warm partisan of Mr. Clay, has recently declared that "Henry Clay is as much an anti-mason, as William Wirt." Upon this view of the subject, we ask, how can that portion of our fellow-citizens who are masons give their suffrages to a man, who, to gratify his unchastened ambition, can prove recreant to every principle of honor, by accepting, sid from men who have denounced him as the and from whence by a natural easy transition, the abetter of "murder and treason," and whom he has denounced in the letter before alluded to, as besottled maniwhere commences a series of adventures of singular | k ms, the United States Senator, all along one of us, acs? Having repaired, yesterdy afternoon, to the Catholic Cemetery to entomb the remains of a departed friend, we were startled by a spectacle as revolting to the feelings of humanity as it is derogatory to the character of tha city authorities: a coffin, the lid of which had been thrown side, exhibited a corpse in a state of most fetid decomp sition. On proceeding a little farther, we discovered 5 o. 6 other uninterred bodies, which, as we have been creditly informed, had been deposited there in the early part of [COMMUNICATED.] y informed, had been deposited there in the early part of the forenoon. To whose province does it appertain to remedy evils of such a disastrous consequence to the community? If the inhumation of these bodies be not obligatory on the part of our chief municipal magistrate, on the ground of compassion, is it not rendered his bounden duty by the sanitary laws of the city?
