SATURDAY, [illegible], 1828.

☞ We [illegible] announce that Mr. A. Payson [illegible] at the office of [illegible] the city of New-Orleans, [illegible] election.

We are [illegible] to state that MANUEL FLEETWOOD will be a candidate at the next election for the District Recorder.

[From the N. Y. American.]

The Liverpool Advertiser is [illegible] upon the President's Message, [illegible] this notice of character, and incidentally [illegible] political character.

Mr. Adams is able to make the grateful acknowledgment for [illegible] that "as large and liberal [illegible] has been [illegible] the indulgence of heaven [illegible] over [illegible] the imperfections of man upon earth," and we cannot with the addition of [illegible] allow [illegible] there is no country in the world [illegible] more [illegible] marks of [illegible] than [illegible] republic of [illegible] This [illegible] confidence [illegible] and honest [illegible] nion on the [illegible] relative to every department [illegible] national affairs—foreign, commercial, [illegible] civil, military, naval, [illegible] powers of the [illegible] to [illegible] alteration [illegible] bargain [illegible] interest [illegible] it. All is [illegible] because all is honest, and what is more useful to observe, all is honest because all is open. Experience is [illegible] there proving every day, [illegible] superintendence is the first, [illegible] for the virtue, and the strongest [illegible] to the diligence of public functionaries.

MR. ADAMS [illegible] ever there was a striking illustration of the [illegible] remark, that no [illegible] nor integrity, nor services, can [illegible] a public man from the assaults of calumny, it is furnished in the instance of Mr. Adams. Plain, simple, laborious, [illegible] honest, he has been charged with profuse, extravagant, and unlawful demands upon the public treasury—with habits of life directly the opposite of those he is known to possess—and with encouraging, by proroguing the houses, repugnant to all his [illegible] opinions and practice. Nor has he been free from obscure and filthy sources [illegible] these disgusting fabrications have been spread forth. Out of the floor of Congress, in legislative resolves, in State Conventions, they have been repeated and enlarged upon, until the retention of falsehood has in some degree produced the [illegible] of truth. The charges especially, among the rest, have been dwelt upon—the large sums received by Mr. [illegible] in the various [illegible] and the [illegible] table.

To these two charges, as well as to several others, Mr. Everett took upon himself last week, in the able speech he delivered on the retrenchment resolutions, to reply in details and certainly no case was ever more clearly made out, than that in each and every particular of imputed wrong in [illegible] there was nothing but [illegible] unqualified fabrication. N. Y. American.

Fatal Accident.—We learn that [illegible] afternoon Mr. Barneett, residing between Laurens and Thompson streets in Girod street, left [illegible] for a few moments, his wife, a very corpulent woman, about 60 years of age, sitting by the fire, supposed to have been asleep; and on his return found her enveloped in flames [illegible] state that she died a short time after.—[Journal of Commerce.]

Mineralogy.—We learn from the reported proceedings of the Rhode Island Legislature, that a very large proportion of the suits [illegible] in that court for the recovery of debts, are commenced by justices of the peace for [illegible] sums—some of the writs demanding sometimes up to the enormous sum of twelve and a half cents! The law makers should bear for a moment in their minds the saying of Andrews Ferry to them his code of [illegible] law."—Bulletin.

There are nearly twelve millions of inhabitants in the British Isles, who speak the Celtic language, and have either no knowledge, or a very imperfect one, of the English tongue.

Among the list of exports from Vera Cruz in the three months of October, November and December, 1827, there [illegible] dollars in gold and silver; ten boxes of silver in bars; and 145 [illegible] (a weight of eight ounces) of the [illegible] metal.

On [illegible] October last, a young man [illegible] while [illegible] was [illegible] charged [illegible] two into [illegible] de-[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [
