The bet of $ 500 on the presidential question, proposed by the Courrier, was immediately accepted, and the money staked on both sides.

LONDON, July 30. It will be recollected, that early in the year, a large body of troops was assembled at Toulon with the view of proceeding to the Morea—but it was not then thought advisable by the Allies of France to have recourse to arms for the purpose of effecting the evacuation of the Morea, and accelerating the establishment of the independence of Greece. It was hoped, that Turkey, seeing the danger of her position, would yield to the pressing demands of the Allies, and consent to negotiate on the basis of the Treaty of London. France, therefore, deferred to the representations of our Allies, and the expedition was abandoned. It is now resumed, and the operation will now take place with the entire concurrence of the British Government.

The object of it is by cutting off Ibrahim's communication by land as well as by sea, to force him to return to Egypt.

The Committee of the French Chamber of Deputies, appointed to inquire into the conduct of the late Ministry of Villele, has made a long report, the result of which is, that there is ground for impeaching it at Minister of speculation and treason. The Committee were divided in this opinion 5 to 4. The report was taken up in the Chamber after the subject of the Budget.

The British expedition to the Morea, it is said, will set sail on the 15th inst. and the troops composing it are to embark on the 5th. The Committee calculates on the advantage to be derived by France from having an army on the spot, in order to secure something for herself in the partition of the Ottoman Empire, which is likely to take place. This is speaking out, at least; and if such be the sentiments of France the prospect of maintaining the integrity of the Turkish empire becomes more faint than ever it has been.

PARIS, July 26. Mr Stratford Canning arrived on the 23rd July at Leghorn, proceeding in all haste to Ancona, and thence to Corfu. A squadron, commanded by Captain Cuivillier, arrived at Toulon on the 23d July; it has brought back our troops from Cadix.

PARIS, July 27. The expedition to the Morea is decided in principle but part of the details which have been given are premature.

The following are the particulars that we have collected, and which, we believe may be depended upon as correct.

The expedition will be commanded, as has been stated, by Lieut.-General Maison, but there will be no other general officer of the same rank.

Majors Generals Hignouet and Tiberce Sebastiani will be employed. The names of the other Major-Generals are not known.

The expedition is composed of eighteen battalions of Infantry, of the regiment of chasseurs on horse-back, commanded by Colonel Sandons, which was at Barcelona, and of a detachment of artillery. It is believed that part of the French garrison of Cadix will join the expedition. The military and civil officers have orders to be at Toulon on the 5th of August.

M. de Villand, who is charged with the chief direction of the administration of the corps of the army composing the expedition is still at Paris.

FRANCE. On the 10th of July, a petition had been presented to the Chamber of Deputies, complaining of the abstraction of money from letters at the Post office. This application gave rise to a good deal of discussion concerning the direction of the Post office establishment. The member who presented it, stated his belief that the Black Cabinet, for opening letters had been abolished by the present Minister. M. de Vaulchier, the Director of the Post office, while these things are said to have taken place, admitted that letters had been opened and that money had been abstracted from them but denied that any encouragement had been given to such practices by the negligence or indifference of the direction. It has been proposed to transfer the petition to the Minister of Finance, but the Ministry assumed the assembly that the Cabinet Note did not now exist. In order to show the general good management and strict faith of the establishment, he added that in ten years only ten letters with money had been lost, and of these, three had been robbed by open force.

In the French Chamber of Deputies lately; an unusually tumultuous debate took place on the subject of the reorganization of the National Guards at Paris.

Amidst the loudest uproar the question was put and carried by a large majority. (Voices from the extreme right.)—How, have you then voted for the re-establishment of the National Guard of Paris? (Great noise.)

M. de la Baslaye.—It is not the National Guard of Paris, but of the Kingdom.

The President—I am going to put the order of the day on the second part.

The President having afterwards declared that no extraneous subject should be introduced.

M. Peton exclaimed. This is tyrannical.

Voices on the right order.—Order! order!

M. Peton.—Order yourselves.

The order of the day (says the Journal des Debats) was then put in the midst of indescribable tumult; a number of members declared that they would not vote, and the chamber at length separated in great agitation, which had lasted during two hours.

It is said, that in the secret committee which followed the public sitting, M. Faube de Salverte read a proposition to the following effect:

Resolved, That an humble address be presented to his Majesty, supplicating him to revoke the ordinance which pronounced the disbanding of the National Guards of Paris.

It was to be taken into consideration in a secret committee.

(From the Gazette de France, July 24.)

FRANKFORT, July 12. It is affirmed that the Prince of Hesse Homburg, who is at the head-quarters of the Russian army, is entrusted with a particular negotiation, the result of which may lead to great modification in the policy which Austria has observed ever since the signing of the War in the East. This negotiation is presumed to be connected with the resolution which the Cabinet of Vienna has taken, to assemble a numerous army in the environs of Pesth, besides the forces already assembled on the frontiers.

It is said that the negotiations between the Cabinets of Vienna, Turin, and Naples, are nearly concluded. It is still firmly believed that it is proposed to establish a federative system in Italy, under the protectorate of Austria.

The War in Turkey.—The London Courier, in speaking of the prospects of the Russian army, remarks, that no well founded conclusions can be drawn from a reference to previous campaigns, because the plan of the present is entirely new. Instead of attempting to force the great passes of the Balkan Mountains, as heretofore, those formidable points are not considered necessary to the invaders, whose design is to keep along the coast, near enough to hold a constant communication with the fleet. The eastern pass through the mountains is the only one which they will find necessary to get possession of; and that it is resumed, can be effected without much loss or delay. The provision and ammunition trains of the army being materially reduced and lightened by the aid of the fleet, the progress of the troops will be less exposed to obstructions; while the enemy will find it difficult to guard every exposed point, and to meet with necessary promptitude every movement made with such force and celerity. The Emperor must have had great confidence of success, or he could not have so readily yielded to the wishes of England and France, in abstaining from hostilities against the Turks in the Archipelago.—N. Y. Dai. Adv.

Taint hope of smuggling!—The news of the passing of the American tariff has cast a general damp on business in this neighbourhood, and, as far as we can learn, in the whole of the clothing districts in the north. Our market on Tuesday was remarkably flat, and we understand that already the manufacturers have imposed a check on their power of production, which had recently been exerted, in many instances, both night and day. The more sanguine part of the community seem to think that smuggling will ensue to a large extent in the finer fabrics; but no one indulges hopes of that sort, relative to coarse and bulky. Few, we imagine, are willing to let themselves believe the blow that has been struck at trade, and some find consolation in the idea, that the tariff will produce more discontent and injury in America than in England.

The Emperor of Russia is building a church, which, it is said, he intends shall be the largest ever built. There will be 42 stone columns, each 34 feet high, each weighing 120 tons, each 7 feet in diameter, and each of one solid piece of rock.

Commodore Porter has written to a friend in Baltimore, under date of Aug. 2d, that his health has suffered by the influence of the climate, and that he has asked leave of absence from the Mexican government.

The London Morning Chronicle of the 21st July says, "Strange rumors have been some time afloat with respect to the expenses incurred by the Duke of Clarence, without any intelligible object. It is said the price of the powder expended in salutes amounted to a very large sum. This expenditure was, it is said, the cause of the recent communication between the Premier and his Royal Highness. We observe from the court circular, that his Royal Highness has returned to Portsmouth.
